Seminarian Writes in Defense of Fr. Coughlin

WE MAY be wrong but we think you'll be interested in what a student at the Minor Seminary at St. Meinrad, Ind., wrote recently in the school paper concerning Father Coughlin.

Due to space limitations we cannot reprint the article in full. Here are excerpts, however:

"Within the last year the right of free speech established in this country by the Constitution has received a severe blow. One of the greatest and most popular exponents of Christian doctrine has been denied the use of the farthest reaching utility of public speech — the radio. With little or no reason stated, the majority (one or two excepted) of the large radio stations in this United States . . . refused to sell time at commercial rates and advanced payment, to one of our own, an honorable gentleman, a good Catholic, a priest of God — I speak of the Rev. Charles Coughlin . . .

"Remarkably and persistently, he has done the utmost to create in America a sense of Christian morality and to establish the fundamental principle of Jesus Christ. Concerning this, I quote the Most Reverend Michael J. Gallagher, late Bishop of Detroit, who, in a nation-wide broadcast, said: 'I pronounce Father Coughlin sound in doctrine, able in its application and interpretation. Freely I give my Imprimatur on his written word and freely I give my approval on the spoken word. May both be circulated without objection throughout the land. Under my jurisdiction he preaches the just codes of the Old Law and its Commandments . . . He preaches the Encyclicals as he has been ordered to do.'

"The other day a good friend of mine said to me, 'but Father Coughlin has stooped to name-calling.' Yes, if Christ stooped to name-calling, so did Fr. Coughlin. Did our Saviour not say to the Pharisees: 'woe to you — hypocrites'? A hypocrite according to the dictionary is a cheat, deceiver, pretender, liar. If my good friend can show me the places in the Reverend Father's sermons where he unjustly called names, I most humbly apologize, and I'm sure Father would also.

"In conclusion, it must be said that we have not tried to make a sweeping proof for the infallibility of Father Coughlin, for the simple reason that we know he is not infallible. We have merely made a sincere effort to bring our reader to a better understanding with a man dear to us . . ."

Doing Their Bit

THE Citizens Keep Out of War Committee of Chicago, Ill., is doing its bit to see that American boys are not sent to suffer and die on foreign battlefields.

The Committee is circulating thousands of folders addressed to President Roosevelt and bearing a picture of "Bundles FROM Britain" — caskets of American dead awaiting shipment to the United States after the World War.

"Keep American boys out of another picture like this! No A.E.F.! No convoys of war material to belligerents by American warships!" the message beside the picture reads.

Inside the folder, in large, boldface type, is the following: "Mr. President: We want you to keep our country out of European politics and out of WAR.

"Follow the Declaration of Independence . . . 'we hold the rest of mankind enemies in war; in peace, friends.'"

Space is reserved at the bottom of the page for the name and address of the individual sender.

This isn't quite as foolish as it may sound to some, for, under the American form of government, the will of the people is supposed to prevail.

It seems to us that if the President were literally deluged with millions of individually-mailed petitions, he and other Administration leaders would be more hesitant about taking further steps toward actual participation in the war abroad.

If the overwhelming majority of the people of the nation are opposed to war — and we firmly believe they are — the Administration shall be forced to maintain peace or forfeit its claim to representing the people. You know what that means.

High Mass for Peace

FRIENDS of SOCIAL JUSTICE in Philadelphia, Pa., have requested us to announce that another High Mass for Peace will be celebrated at 10 a. m., Saturday, May 10, at St. Peter's Church, Philadelphia.

All residents of Philadelphia and vicinity, especially those who were unable to attend the Peace Mass on March 29, are urged to be present at this special service for continued peace to the United States, and the establishment of world peace.

'The Unknown Soldier'

FROM Dorchester, Mass., comes a contribution entitled "The Unknown Soldier," dedicated to the boys who sell SOCIAL JUSTICE on the streets of America.

The Unknown Soldier

On the streets of American cities
In the sunshine, rain, or snow
He is there to meet "his public";
You'll see him wherever you go.

He's the true soldier of Fortitude --
This fair American youth,
Who sells to the passing citizens
The plain unbiased truth.

Smiles and good wishes are many
As he stands there alone in his pride.
The jeers and insults of the rabble
With silent contempt sets aside.

No banners around him waving --
This fair American youth,
As he sells his SOCIAL JUSTICE
With its plain unbiased truth.

He is one of the Unknown Soldiers.
Scion of a noble race,
Who smiles with the good, scorns the rude
And looks the world in the face

Hull, Knox Talks Recall Fr. Coughlin's Prediction

"THIS is our fight!"

With these damnable words, Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox, startled the nation.

On the night these words were uttered Cordell Hull, speaking in his official capacity and voicing the sentiments and determinations of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, virtually urged this nation to go all the way to the defense of the British — all the way, including men, money and munitions.

Attached to Mr. Knox's address were the words: "Having gone thus far, we can only go on."

And then there were Mephistophelian sentiments about morality reminiscent of the warning that the devil can quote Scripture for his purposes.

Sample: "We must make our promise good to give aid to Britain" . . . "The United States can no longer occupy the immoral and craven position of asking others to make all the sacrifice to this victory which we recognize is so essential to us" . . . "Our manhood and our self-respect to man that we shall assume our part of the burden."

Kuhn, Loeb and Company evidently knew what they were doing when they purchased large holdings in Frank Knox's Chicago Daily News.

And the powers-that-be knew what they were doing when they nominated this war mongering, all-out-for-Britain publisher to assume the position of Secretary of the Navy.

When Frank Knox said, "the last link in the chain of encirclement that is being formed by the Axis powers" is the recent non-aggression pact between Russia and Japan, he was correct.

But this last link was forged in Washington by the blundering, Semitic, Oriental-Masonic foreign policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

Behind all these words and threats to our national peace uttered by Frank Knox and Cordell Hull is Mr. Roosevelt.

And behind Mr. Roosevelt is the spirit of hatred, revenge and destruction stemming from the refugees and their compatriots in whose hands he is putty.

Mr. Roosevelt solemnly promised the American people in his presidential campaign that he stood for peace; that he was opposed to America's entrance into this war.

Shall he become another Woodrow Wilson who campaigned on the platform "He kept us out of war" when, factually, he had already arranged to engage us into war?

The American people are bound by no honor, by no morality to go into this war.

Didn't Miss

ALTHOUGH many scoffed at the time, Father Coughlin, in June, 1938, predicted the events of fateful April, 1941.

His prediction appears in the body of the article on this page.

Its accuracy is amazing. For example: "it is the hope of the revolutionists to have expended . . . sixteen billion, six hundred million dollars by April, 1941. This means that besides the five billion dollars which the New Deal is now borrowing . . . another sixteen billion, six hundred million will have been borrowed by April, 1941 . . ."

But the American President is bound by honor and by morality to live up to his pledge to keep us out of war.

From the very outset this Administration has been heckling, harassing, hampering and harpooning the German people.

Long before Britain declared war, the Roosevelt Administration excluded Germany from participating in equal trade relations with other nations in the world.

Step by step, under the influence of Oriental Freemasons and international-banking Jews, Mr. Roosevelt permitted himself to become the Excalibur — the sword of revenge.

In plainer language, he chose to play the part of the catspaw to serve the war mongers who are blighting civilization.

Having failed to rectify the domestic ills of America, he was anxious to grasp the opportunity of playing the role of world savior at the behest of the world destroyers.

And so, it means war, according to Secretary Knox and Secretary Hull.

Prior to 1776 our nation was infested with Tories — pro-Britishers — who were intent on holding us in economic bondage to George III and his Bank of England imperialism.

George Washington and his associates rose against them.

George Washington and his associates were called rebels and upon them was heaped odium for their courageous stand.

Where is the spirit of 1776 today when Tory Knox, Tory Hull and Tory Roosevelt are endeavoring to undo all that Washington did?

Where is the spirit of 1776 today? It is blitzkrieged by groups of Wall-Streeters, by groups of kept journalists, by groups of Oriental Freemasons, by groups of Oriental refugees, by groups of fools' gold lovers.

In the June 6, 1938, edition of SOCIAL JUSTICE magazine, Father Coughlin made a prophecy — as the readers of this magazine appraised it.

It was not a prophecy. It was a statement based upon a plan which had been disclosed to Father Coughlin by one of the secretaries of one of the commissars of Russia.

And that prophecy—so-called—is copied in part as follows from the files of SOCIAL JUSTICE. It is almost three years old. Wrote Father Coughlin:

"The policy of destructionism . . . is calculated by the agents of Moscow to reach its climax when sixteen billion, six hundred million more dollars will have been borrowed by the Federal Government from the Federal Reserve Banks. At that point, when our national debt reaches such a height and when taxes will have been increased to meet the obligation of the bonds then extant, the climax will have been reached when the agents of Moscow have calculated that bankruptcy will ensue. This means that the taxpayers no longer will be able to meet the obligation of the fountain pen credit money and the bonds then existing. This means that the bonds will depreciate so radically that there will be a general dumping of bonds upon the market. This means that stocks and bonds will melt to a mere fraction of their present values. This means that repudiation of bonds, or general confiscation of property will follow.

"When this Moscow information was handed to me more than three weeks ago, I shuddered at the prospect which was awaiting us. Then, I concluded, it was best to employ some actuaries and financial experts to check the Moscow figures. Five days before the writing of this article their unbiased report was given to me in strict confidence. Their figures coincided with those of Moscow with only a slight difference of three hundred million dollars.

"Now, my most dependable informant, who has gained his information from Moscow headquarters, further informs me that it is the hope of revolutionists to have expended the sixteen billion, six hundred million dollars by April, 1941. This means that besides the five billion dollars which the New Deal is now borrowing in the form of fountain pen credit from the Federal Reserve Banks, another sixteen billion six hundred million will have been borrowed by April, 1941.

"That it will be borrowed and totally expended shortly after that date appears to be morally certain when we consider that the great majority of uninformed but well intentioned Americans think that the New Deal is performing a just and humanitarian service in feeding the poor on dole rations and in operating through the inefficient W.P.A. organization. It is the plan, so I am informed, to make sure that the so-called depression will not be ended. Therefore, Congress, be it composed of Democrats or Republicans, will be forced to vote more relief money every eight or twelve months to continue paying starvation wages for relief and to continue exacting more taxes from the capital of those who own wealth.

"It would be preposterous for me to expect you to believe this prediction just the same as it was illogical for me to expect you to have believed me in 1937 — in the lap of a revived prosperity — when I predicted that on November 10th of the fol-

Britain Driven From Europe

THE battle of Greece brings to a close the century-old domination of Europe by Britain.

Soon Gibraltar — as soon as the Germans choose — will fall.

Soon the Suez Canal, the Rothschild's tollgate to the East, will be captured.

The British fleet now engaged in Mediterranean waters must either make a break for liberty or find itself trapped.

What did Great Britain contribute to Europe?

Not language; for Europeans do not employ English except as an accessory tongue.

Not art; for, by and large, the greatest artists are native to Continental Europe, not to England.

Not religion; for it was England which co-operated with its Henry VIII in destroying the religion of Europe.

In a sense, England did contribute some science — not as much, however, as she received from Europe.

But England did contribute a bondage of financialism.

England did contribute a policy of "divide and rule" by imposing her so-called balance of power upon the exploited populations across the channel. This was most manifest following the signing of the Treaty of Versailles.

Following the Boer War, which ended approximately at the beginning of this century, England succeeded in doubling her supply of commercial gold. With this appropriated African gold she extended credits in every European country.

With this appropriated gold she manipulated chancellories and controlled trade.

With this appropriated gold her powerful, privately-owned Bank of England arranged affiliations with the Rothschild-dominated banks over the continent.

And now, all that has ceased.

The Bank of England, which controlled until recently the British politics and English politics, could not alleviate the sufferings of millions of Englishmen and, therefore, could not rule successfully.

The Union Jack will no longer be unfurled over European capitals.

The Bank of England no longer will control the destinies of England itself.

It is too premature to predict what will eventuate in England. We know, however, that greedy international capitalism, through its abuses, definitely bred Marxism.

Possibly, a Marxist form of government will come into power.

Possibly, Ernest Bevin and the Priestly group will gain control.

Possibly, private propertyship will be washed up. And, possibly, Christianity will be manacled.

Democracy, however, will be annihilated and empire will be lost.

While many persons shrink in fear from what may occur, their reason impels them to trace the causes of any future disaster to the concentrators of wealth, to the despoilers of the population of the world, to the private coiners and regulators of usurious money, who thought first of themselves and last of their fellow creatures.

Draftees 18—21

BRAIN trusters at Washington are pondering upon the project of drafting the boys of America between the ages of 18 and 21.

These boys do not know where they are going to fight.

They do not know why they are going to fight.

They are nothing more than muscular cannon fodder more apt to do as they are told by well-paid, well-fed officers than are the boys between the ages of 21 and 35.

If the boys between the ages of 18 and 21 are drafted into the army to fight, here is a slogan for them:

"IF WE ARE OLD ENOUGH TO FIGHT, WE ARE OLD ENOUGH TO VOTE."

Let their parents teach them this slogan.

Let their parents teach them that they were not born to fight for the protection of a pot of gold confiscated from the American people either directly through the gold nationalization act, or indirectly through tax money.

Let their parents teach them that this gold — confiscated and purchased — was handed over, for the most part to the private owners of the Federal Reserve Banking System to be used in making prepayment for the preservation of Britain's imperialism.

If the boys must fight, let them stay at home and fight—fight against the iniquities of a domestic economy which remain unsolved as our President is inching daily into the maelstrom of a foreign conflict.

Johnny Got His Gun

THE author of JOHNNY GOT HIS GUN is Dalton Trumbo.

Ignoring all punctuation marks in his writing, Trumbo passed on the following words to the war-makers:

"If you make a war . . . if there are guns to be aimed . . . if there are bullets to be fired . . . if there are men to be killed . . . they will not be us. They will not be us . . . the guys who grow wheat and turn it into food . . . the guys who make clothes and paper and houses and tiles . . . the guys who build dams and power plants and string the long moaning high tension wires . . . the guys who crack crude oil down into a dozen different parts . . . who make light globes and sewing machines and shovels and automobiles and airplanes and tanks and guns . . . oh no . . . it will not be us who die. It will be you.

"It will be you . . . you who urge us on to battle . . . you who incite us against ourselves . . . you who would have one cobbler kill another cobbler . . . you who would have one man who works kill another man who works . . . you who would have one human being who wants only to live kill another human being who wants only to live. Remember this. Remember this well . . . you people who plan for war. Remember this you patriots . . . you fierce ones . . . you spawners of hate . . . you inventors of slogans. Remember this as you have never remembered anything else in your lives.

"We are men of peace . . . we are men who work and we want no quarrel. But if you destroy our peace . . . if you take away our work . . . if you try to range us one against the other . . . we will know what to do. If you tell us to make the world safe for democracy we will take you seriously . . . and . . . by God and by Christ . . . we will make it so. We will use the guns you force upon us . . . we will use them to defend our very lives and the menace to our lives does not lie on the other side of a no man's land that was set apart without our consent . . . it lies within our own boundaries here and now . . . we have seen it and we know it.

"Put the guns into our hands and we will use them. Give us the slogans and we will turn them into realities. Sing the battle hymns and we will take them up where you left off. Not one . . . not ten . . . not ten thousand . . . not a million . . . not ten millions . . . not a hundred millions . . . but a billion . . . two billions of us . . . all the people of the world . . . we will have the slogans and we will have the hymns and we will have the guns and we will use them and we will live. Make no mistake of it . . . we will live. We will be alive . . . and we will walk and talk and eat and sing and laugh and feel and love and bear our children in tranquility . . . in security . . . in decency . . . in peace. You plan the wars . . . you masters of men . . . plan the wars and point the way . . . and we will point the gun."

These paragraphs should be read by Messrs. Knox, Hull, Winchell, Baruch, Frankfurter, Morgenthau, Lehman, Pepper, Glass, Ickes and all the others who are shouting "all-out-for-Britain," "Save Democracy," etc., etc., etc.

Victory Is Defeat

THOUSANDS of newspapers and radio voices are endeavoring to sell the American public a package of square-circleism.

In plain words, they are trying to deceive us by saying the German victory in Greece is really a German defeat.

As a sample of this vicious propaganda, we read in the New York Herald Tribune:

"Even if the whole of the British army in Greece is lost, the sacrifice will still have contributed vastly more to the final victory than the same troops could ever have done if husbanded in helplessness elsewhere. It was in that knowledge that the British staked this comparatively small army. It was in a similar knowledge that the heroic Greeks have staked their land, their homes and themselves."

Supposing the Herald Tribune editor had the opportunity to talk to 20-million English blitz-ees and to report truthfully what they said, how long would this criminal war endure?

Definitely, it is a war which despises human nature.

It is a war which is willing to kill off millions of innocent civilians for the preservation of the rotten economic international gold system which the Herald Tribune and other such propagandists have been protecting at the expense of an exploited population over the entire world.

Such propagandists are nothing but gold stooges, Midas-lovers and calf worshippers.

The tide has turned.

98 per cent of the American people can not be fooled when they see their boys herded off to fight a battle that is not their battle; to protect a government that is not their government; to safeguard an economy that is not their economy and to murder their brothers who are not their enemies.

Until now American people have been satisfied to bestir each other with words.

The day is fast approaching when the authors of the propaganda instanced above, and their international banking bosses will be confronted with more than words.

If the American people cannot devise a system of normal living within the precincts of this continent; a system of economy which will banish want in the midst of plenty here in America, they are not deserving of possessing the political liberty that is theirs.

For, political liberty without economic liberty is a mockery.

And, to internationalize the immoralities of the wicked capitalism which has trampled upon civilization for centuries, is the coward's way out.

Were it diplomatic, millions of Americans who do not applaud all that Hitler stands for would be willing to applaud many of the things which he has put into practice.

The American people can accomplish in America the good things that Hitler accomplished in Europe, without taking his errors to their bosom.

American people can separate the chaff from the wheat, leaving Hitler's bad things to him and to the German people to rectify.

Rule Britannia

SIR PERCY NOBLE is commander-in-chief of the British Atlantic fleet.

Recently he became aware that Britain is losing the battle of the Atlantic.

Upon the following figures he bases his calculations:

(a) At the beginning of the war Britain had 21-million tons of shipping to which, in the last year, she added another 9-million tons of allied shipping and 3-million tons of German and Italian shipping. Approximately 6-million tons have been sunk by the Axis powers, leaving a balance of 27-million tons available for British use.

(b) About one-half of that tonnage is required either for transporting troops, directing convoys or for inland water use. This means not more than 14-million tons available to serve England directly in the matter of foodstuffs, clothing, building materials, etc., etc.

(c) Because the ordinary journey from the United States or South America or India is twice as difficult and requires twice the time as a result of enemy submarine activity, this 14-million tons is reduced to a practical 7-million tons of available shipping.

(d) Because Plymouth, Portsmouth, Weymouth, South Hampton, Liverpool, London, Bristol, Edinburgh, Newcastle, Cardiff and Dover have been bombed into uselessness, a bottleneck has been set up for landing goods in England which reduces the efficiency of unloading by one-half thereby leaving approximately 3,500,000 normal tons available for use.

(e) Because black-outs prohibit the unloading of ships at night, the 3,500,000 tons shrink to 2,500,000 tons.

(f) Because the Luftwaffe is sinking ships twice as fast as England can replace them or commandeer them the 2,500,000 tons will decrease soon to 1-million tons.

And that is the end of the battle of the Atlantic.

According to the above figures the battle of the Atlantic and the battle for England will have terminated by September at the latest. Some optimists are of the opinion that Hitler will finish the job to help Mr. Roosevelt celebrate July 4th.

And some English are saying that if Mr. Chamberlain had not been hard pressed by Messrs. Roosevelt, Hull, Morgenthau and Bullitt, there could have been a decent peace arranged with some of the British empire remaining intact, particularly that part of the British empire we call England whose population is forced to suffer the most unimaginable tortures to uphold a modern financial economic system called international capitalism — a system that succeeded in impoverishing 90 per cent of Englishmen either through exploitation or by taxation.

When England bows before Adolf Hitler, Churchill, Eden, Hore-Belisha, Duff Cooper and their compatriot war-mongers will find safety in America to set up a musical comedy government.

The poor people will remain at home to nurse their wounds, comfort their mentally deranged and dig themselves out of the rubble created as much by the war-mongers as Hitler's bombers.

And these poor people who remain at home, together with the released prisoners who have been languishing behind barbed wire and iron bars for a year, will be designated by the Falstafian imperial government resident in America as "quitters," or "Nazis," or "radicals."

If the reader of this article cares to exercise his memory he will recollect what was predicted in these pages in 1938 relative to this war wherein civilian populations suffer.

Sometimes it occurs to us that the whole thing was planned—"We planned it that way." Sometimes it occurs to us that the brain trusters of international finance made up their minds to destroy England, knowing that they could not stop the formation of the United States of Europe.

And why?

So that the rulers of the United States of Europe would find an empty shell in England once all the gold of the gold mongers had been cargoed safely to New York, Washington and Fort Knox.

Henry VIII's Loot

HENRY VIII, the royal bluebeard and defender of the faith of the church which he was instrumental in establishing, saw to it that the imperial treasury grew fat with stolen churches, monasteries and convents.

Henry VIII had an idea — a fixed idea about religion. He believed in a species of union of church and state with the state dominating the church.

Preceding Adolf Hitler, the founder of the Anglican Church was the first Nazi inasmuch as he restricted religion in his day to practices within the walls of the church supervised by bishops and ministers of his own appointment, who were forbidden to establish organizations of Christianity independent of the state.

And, so much for the first Nazi religionist in England.

If he confiscated cathedrals, churches and monasteries — well over 1,000 in number, including modern ones — they have been smashed by Adolf Hitler's Luftwaffe.

History persists in reteaching the lesson that no one profits by ill-gotten goods.

James P. Warburg —War-Monger

ON Thursday, April 24, Station WMCA had the honor of broadcasting a reply to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh made by the "Fight for Freedom Committee."

The broadcaster was Mr. James P. Warburg—scion of the gentleman who founded the privately owned Federal Reserve Bank.

Mr. Warburg said that Col. Lindbergh was acting as an enemy of the country in delaying the total entry of the United States into the war on the side of Britain.

And he added that this delay is betraying our best hopes of defense.

The speech was concluded by Mr. Warburg, who thanked Bishop Hobson of Cincinnati (Episcopalian), chairman of the "Fight for Freedom Committee."

In those two names—Warburg and Hobson—there is unveiled a beautiful tie-up.

Bishop Hobson indirectly regards King George as the titular head of his church.

And James Warburg indirectly regards the British Empire as the happy hunting ground for international banking Jews.

Colonel Charles Lindbergh need not be afraid when he is confronted by such committees and such spokesmen.

Raymond Moley Speaks Out

THE ERUDITE Raymond Moley—one of America's keenest minds—recently spoke at a luncheon of the Executives' Club in Hotel Sherman, Chicago.

Realist that he is, he knows the actual trend of British political affairs.

Following the war, Britain will be no more a democracy than are China, India or Russia. England itself will evolve into a socialist state, endeavoring to impose its totalitarianism upon that part of the Empire which remains intact under the Union Jack.

The ex-Undersecretary of State warned that the United States is on the threshold of imperialism. He might have added that its entrance into this war points to our establishing a form of totalitarian imperialism.

When nearly 98 per cent of the population of this country are against our entering into war, and when 2 per cent—or at the most 5 per cent—insist that we take a blood bath, that's dictatorship; that's anti-democracy; and that's the beginning of the end of Christianity, despite all unctuous denials which this statement will evoke from compromising ecclesiastics.

Mr. Moley linked Wendell Willkie with the British socialist, Harold Laski.

And he linked the Republican presidential candidate with Laski's objectives of socialism.

One pungent remark came from the speaker's lips when he said: "When the wise are silent, we are governed by fools—and we are reaching that point when our wise are being silenced."

There is the case of Father Coughlin being silenced.

There is the case of Col. Chas. A. Lindbergh being smeared preparatory to his being silenced.

There is the case of the Christian Front being silenced, and in its place a compromisers' front being set up to help build an empire of totalitarianism—godless totalitarianism.

Mr. Moley criticized the administration for imposing what he said were back-breaking burdens on industrial management and plaguing industry with alphabetical agencies.

And Mr. Moley could have included in his speech a review of the plans formulated since 1934 to embroil this nation in an all-out war for the defense of Oriental Freemasonry and the supremacy of the gold-mongers.

Yugoslavia's Post Mortem

PREMIER SIMOVITCH beautifully performed the post mortem ceremonies for the synthetic Frankenstein known as Yugoslavia.

Remembering that Yugoslavia was a creature of the Peace Treaty of Versailles, it had no more chance of being a success in the world than there was a chance of peace resulting from that document.

In fact, Yugoslavia was nothing more than a mixture of scrambled eggs—scrambled intentionally for the purpose of rewarding the barbarities of the Serbians in their aggressions against the Croatians.

And now comes the post mortem which records messages of sympathy from President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill mourning over the demise of the monstrous state that never should have been.

Premier Simovitch said: "Despite the allies' willingness, they were unable to help us with planes and armored units which were badly needed."

And yet, both America and Great Britain promised help to Yugoslavia.

It was in the same manner that Britain promised help to Poland.

And no promises were fulfilled.

The Yugoslavian army, nearly half of which was Croatians, seized the opportunity to reward their Serbian aggressors on the approach of Hitler's legions.

And the reward matured into the destruction of the Greek and Australian forces.

Promises made by the present American administration and the present British government to Ireland, to Portugal and Spain will be forthcoming.

These nations will know how to interpret the promises, having read the post mortem of Yugoslavia.

Incidentally, it will be more than poetic justice if the aid promised by President Roosevelt to Great Britain fails to arrive.

Britain will be receiving exactly the same package which she handed to Poland, to Norway, to Belgium, to France, to Greece and to Yugoslavia.

Churchill Must Go

THE SPIRIT of Gallipoli overshadows Winston Churchill. It was he who was responsible for the foolhardy and tragic attempt to storm the Dardanelles during the first World War.

He failed—and at a tremendous loss in men and prestige for Britain.

It is he who was responsible — with Anthony Eden — for plunging Britain into the second World War, unprepared as she was.

It is he whose name will be associated with the British debacle in Norway.

It is he whose name will be linked with the retreat from Dunkirk.

It is he whose name will be identified with the disaster in Greece.

Churchill was born for failure and all who followed his blind leadership will end in the ditch of failure.

Sometime ago this commentator sat down to luncheon in the Savoy Hotel, London, with an eminent group of Englishmen, among whom was Randolph Churchill, the son of "Gallipoli" Churchill.

The conversation hinged upon American men and affairs.

The subject of Semitism was broached.

Out of a clear sky, son Randolph informed the assembled guests of the affiliations existing between his family and Jewish families; and boastfully added that his father was the representative in England of Mr. Bernard Baruch, the American financier.

The affiliations of the Churchill family to Jews was known by the group. The added boast relative to Mr. Baruch was not known.

At the moment, Churchill's evil star is setting in a bath of blood.

For political reasons — and against the advice of military authorities—he ordered the African campaign conducted by General Wavell.

Fed by British propaganda, the world experienced a thrill resulting from bogus British victories while both German and Italian troops artfully retreated to draw the British into a trap.

Against the advice of military leaders, Churchill ordered English, African, Australian, New Zealand and other troops into the theater of the Greek war—an army estimated at 60,000.

As a result of his ill-conceived plans, the forcefulness of British propaganda has been nullified; Northern Africa has been lost; Greece has been annihilated and the corpses of the British troops are bobbing on the waves of the Aegean Sea.

No greater disaster in all Britain's history has befallen her than this for which "Gallipoli" Churchill has been responsible.

And it was he who, disdaining the same sound advice of Chamberlain, has vindicated Chamberlain now in his grave with a broken heart.

Under Churchill England has matured into a socialistic state.

Under Churchill prisons and concentration camps groan with suspects and political opponents.

Under Churchill the beauteous England has been scarred, maimed and crippled in the name of democracy—a democracy which was not democracy; a democracy which was identified with the supremacy of the international bankers over the world.

And all this time the psychic Germans understood that if Churchill were given enough rope, he would hang himself and the cause for which he stood.

His kiss is the kiss of death.

It was death for France.

It was death for Norway.

It was death for the Low Countries.

It was death for Greece.

It will be death for every country and every group associated with him.

Soon the prisons and concentration camps of England will be opened.

Soon there will be an upheaval.

Soon the Churchills and the Edens, together with the warmongers and gold-mongers, will find refuge in America to set up a bogus government in exile as millions of poor Englishmen and Englishwomen will have experienced the unbelievable atrocities of war short of death.

While those left behind in a ruined, ravaged country will erect their own government and prepare to rebuild their shattered hopes and dreams, the refugees—safe in America—will pretend to be the omniscient rulers of the nation for which they were responsible in bowing down to destruction.

The sooner England expatriates Churchill, the happier England will be.

Gold and More Gold—An Old Story

A NEWS item dated April 16th informs the American public that the United States Government purchased and received $132-million of newly mined South African gold from the British treasury.

Thus, the waistline of Old Man Fort Knox is growing more rotund every day.

And the American public is paying a fancy price — approximately $35.00 an ounce — to the British for the gold which South Africans are producing for as low as $9.00 an ounce.

Months ago SOCIAL JUSTICE reminded the American public that, with the passage of the Gold Purchase legislation some years ago, we began financing the Second World War in favor of Great Britain.

Our oldsters remember that we financed the first World War for Britain. Having borrowed billions of dollars, the Imperial Government satisfied its common conscience by refusing to pay back the loan according to contract.

Meanwhile, the American people — the taxpayers — shouldered the burden.

Such boldness could not be duplicated for the Second World War. Consequently, the pro-British American Administration conceived the plan of buying gold at double its value in order to establish credits for Britain to carry on the Second World War.

At the present, we are beginning to wonder what use the $23-billion of American bulk gold will be put to when Europe and Asia will be in a position to get along without gold.

Conceivably, our hoard could be used for many purposes.

If imperial Rome supplied silken purple togas for its senators, there is the possibility of our fabricating golden halos for our solons.

In the name of sanitation, it might be well to mold a few golden door knobs to be employed in the White House and elsewhere.

It would be irreverent to resurrect the story of King Croesus — a wealthy king of Lydia who, in the Sixth Century, B. C., was dethroned by Cyrus.

This King Croesus had a mania for gold. And tradition—unsubstantiated—tells us he was slain with a golden bar.

And it would be more than irreverent to recollect the story of Crassus. This Roman gentleman was one of the triplets who operated along with Caesar and Pompey in their drive to subjugate the entire known world with the hope of dividing it up into three spheres of influence.

The story goes that because Crassus was a gold monger as well as a dictator, the Roman citizens pinioned him on the flat of his back and forced him to drink a highball of hot gold.

Somehow or other, war mongers and gold mongers have been identified throughout the ages.

Somehow or other, the gold mongers generally end up by choking on the yellow metal.

Crassus lived between the years 105-53 B. C.

He was distinguished for his oratory. He was famous for having crushed the revolt of the poor men led by Spartacus.

When the Roman Senate conferred upon him the dignity of a consul, which was almost equivalent to the dignity of a President in a modern democracy, Crassus decided to feed the poor people with other people's money.

So, he gave a banquet spread out on ten thousand tables and distributed to every citizen a provision of corn.

It is not ethical to draw parallels and make comparisons.

However, this little piker dictator, Mr. Crassus, was done to death treacherously by the Parthians who took him for what he was — a four-flushing gold monger.

It was they who forced him to drink the first golden fizz.

English Christianity

THERE is a movement in England to unencumber the world from the yoke of Christianity.

The London Catholic Herald (March 28) headlines the question: "Is Priestly Leading a Movement for a World 'Unencumbered by Christianity'?"

The article, in part, reads as follows:

"However, Mr. Priestley's personal campaign would appear to be taking formal shape in a body called the '1941 Committee.' Among those serving on this committee are, in addition to Mr. Priestley himself, Lord Horder, Mr. Vernon Bartlett, Mr. Edward Hulton (Picture Post), Mr. Francis Williams (former Daily Herald editor) and Mr. H. G. Wells.

"H. G. Wells is probably the bitterest and most dangerous opponent of Christianity in this country, and he has already succeeded in persuading the '1941 Committee' to adopt the following resolution:

"'The 1941 Committee welcomes the belated realisation by the Christian Churches of the profound revolutionary quality of the teaching of Jesus of Nazareth, but in view of the fact that it has taken the various Christian ecclesiastical organisations nineteen centuries to make that discovery, the 1941 Committee protests strongly against the proposal to hand back education to their sluggish or insincere control.

"'The 1941 Committee calls for a vigorous revision and expansion of education throughout the world upon modern lines, unencumbered by Christian, Shinto, Jewish or other assumptions.'"

"If war, all may be lost," said Pius XII. Perhaps the world — particularly the English world — is beginning to understand what the Pontiff implied in making that statement.

It appears that, following the war, England will evolve into a form of Socialism, a form which will not openly and physically suppress Christianity as was done in ages gone by; but a form which will employ the so-called failure of Christian leaders to exclude them and their plans from participating in the period of reconstruction.

Poor Refugees

AMERICAN citizens resident in Hoboken, N. J., are finding it increasingly difficult to work up sympathy for certain classes of German refugees seeking haven in America.

A Jersey City newspaper recently published a picture of a large, four-story Hoboken building purchased by a refugee physician, Dr. Ernest Fredland.

The caption under the picture read: "Refugee buys Hoboken block — While definite plans have yet to be made, modernization of 13 storefronts in the solid block of business and dwelling property at 201-13 14th street, Hoboken, is contemplated by Dr. Ernest Fredland of New York City, refugee physician who purchased the property from the Hoboken Bank for Savings through that city's C. B. Snyder Realty Company. This is the third block front sold by the Snyder concern in recent months. Dr. Fredland, compelled to flee Germany some two years ago, holds title to the 14th street property in the 201 Fourteenth Street Corporation. The holdings comprise seven buildings, containing 46 apartments, 13 stores and 8 garages and has an annual rent roll of over $16,000. (Italics ours.) The parcels are assessed at a total of $115,600 and are on a plot approximately 200 by 100 feet. Plans for business modernization of the property are contemplated and it is expected that eventually steam heat will be installed in the dwelling facilities."

Mass Death

A FEW weeks ago the stuffed shirts of Wall Street, united with the stuffed heads of the Harvard Law School to address a letter to Secretary of State Hull protesting the shipment of American food to famine-ridden, unoccupied France.

The letter, signed by 35 so-called humanitarians, concluded:

"When victory is won . . . then America can and must help these peoples to regain their strength. But until this happens let us not be distracted from our single-minded purpose by being soft . . ."

This "single-minded purpose" is the new Wall Street-Washington policy of strengthening American defense by the mass starvation of Europeans.

However, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University and former president of the American Medical Association, has a different view of this program.

In an opinion submitted recently to leading American physicians and psychiatrists, Dr. Wilbur stated that "mass famine, if it is of sufficient virulence and volume," must result in the spread of disease, even across oceans.

"The present Belgian ration," his statement read, "is a starvation ration that. if unchanged, must inevitably result in mass death."

Do Americans who would stop food from going to Europe's starving millions imagine that dead Belgians can rise from their graves to conquer Hitler?

Do they think that a plague from Europe will aid American defense?

Do they think that a New Europe — even a new edition of the old status quo which is what they really want — can ever be built by mentally defective victims of mass famine?

General Sikorski

GENERAL Wladyslaw Sikorski is the premier of the Polish Government-in-exile — whatever that means.

Personally, he is a likeable, idealistic patriot imbued with the same spirit which characterized the "Irish-in-exile" a century and a half ago here in America.

The General belonged, through association, with that group of disillusioned Poles who believed foreign minister Beck — a foreign minister who was gullible enough to lend credence to Britain's empty promises relative to the defense of Poland.

Perhaps no European country in modern times — save Ireland — experienced so much exploitation as did Poland.

Its population, Catholic in faith, was regarded by Russians and Prussians as inferior. Its natural resources, commerce and enterprise were regulated by internationalists. Its citizens were forced to seek habitations outside Poland, particularly in America.

Sound sympathy should be extended to the suffering Poles. Nevertheless, it should be a sympathy based upon factuality.

Although Poland was oppressed from without, its major oppression stemmed from within as was evidenced in the assertions made by many of its prelates — assertions recorded in the book, "An Answer to Father Coughlin's Critics."

A photostatic copy of the original "Polish Documents Relative to the Origin of the War" is in our possession. While the authenticity of these documents has been questioned by some and derided by others, SOCIAL JUSTICE is given to understand on excellent authority that two ambassadors have admitted the veracity of their contents — contents which minced no matters in assigning the blame for Poland's present predicament.

Reputable Polish clergymen and others who are interested in the matter are invited to write to SOCIAL JUSTICE magazine for copies of these Polish documents which we are willing to distribute.

Reading of these documents might clarify several matters which perturb the minds of American-Polish patriots.

Copies can be had both in the original Polish and in a substantially correct English translation.

Diplomatically, General Sikorski refrains from publicly touching upon the betrayal of Poland by British promise makers.

And, incidentally, he takes his place in America with the many governments-in-exile who will set up their tragic Gilbert and Sullivan governments at Washington.

A Tip

Don't Miss Next Week's Issue of SOCIAL JUSTICE Magazine. It Will Contain a Signed Article by Father Coughlin Entitled, "So This Is Democracy."

No Profit in War

SOCIAL JUSTICE believes that industrialists should not make one penny more than their livelihood requires as a result of their war productions.

SOCIAL JUSTICE believes that men engaged in the factories should be paid a living annual wage.

And SOCIAL JUSTICE believes that men serving in the army — a more necessary occupation than serving in the factory, if there is war—should also be paid a living annual wage.

SOCIAL JUSTICE is barred from army camps. Therefore, we can not preach this doctrine of a living annual wage to our soldiers who are just as much entitled to it as are the tycoons in industry and the laborers in factories.

Here is a story which came to this commentator's attention from a member of his staff.

Two brothers in one family were subject to military draft.

The elder—under 35—was deferred because he was engaged in defense work.

The other—under 35—who was a dental technician, had to leave his job and eke out an existence in an army camp on $21.00 a month.

The elder brother is making profits — handsome profits—as a result of his activities, and is erecting a building of his own from these profits.

The younger brother is operating at a loss, working for Uncle Sam.

Where is the justice in all that?

The younger boy spent as many years in preparation for his profession as did the older brother.

The younger boy is disparaged politically.

The older boy is favored politically.

Where is democracy in that?

When the draftee's term of service will have ended, the younger boy comes home to find that his contacts have been assimilated by others and his professional technique dulled.

And he will be penniless to face the depression.

The older boy will have a new building paid for and profits in the bank which will enable him to ride the storm.

And this is democracy!

Definitely, SOCIAL JUSTICE pleads for a living annual wage for the draftees.

And, by a living annual wage for a draftee serving in the ranks, we mean, at least $100.00 a month with board and lodging.

Either pay the boys now concentrated in camps that amount of money or send them home.

Or—and this alternative is not so crazy —conscript all the factory workers, all the industrialists, all the politicians and all the citizens and, pay them $21.00 a month over board and lodging.

By the way, the bondholders are still clipping their coupons—war or no war.

In other words, they are reaping their profits.

Did it ever occur to this moribund government to place a moratorium upon coupons?

It would be no greater sacrifice for bondholders to forego dulling scissors on clipping coupons than for boys to forego making a livelihood for themselves on their jobs or at their occupations.

America Needs Spirit of Martyrs to Save Nation

IN THEIR fight to keep this nation out of foreign wars and to maintain its complete independence of foreign powers Americans today need the same zealous spirit that motivated the Irish martyrs who sacrificed their lives in the Easter Rebellion of 1916.

That was the message delivered by the Rev. Edward Lodge Curran, president of the International Catholic Truth Society, at the annual celebration in New York commemorating the Irish uprising.

"We need men like the martyrs of Easter Week here in the United States of America today," Father Curran declared. "We need a resurrection of Americanism. We need resurrected Americans who will oppose the efforts of our war-minded statesmen and our war mongering propagandists. We need resurrected Americans who will oppose the beginnings of dictatorship in Washington. We need resurrected Americans who will oppose in the press, on the public platform, and in the halls of Government, any attempt to make this country a satellite of England.

"We need resurrected Americans who will dedicate their lives to the continued independence of America. We need resurrected Americans who will fight if need be, a second war for American independence.

"We want no union (with Britain), now or ever. We want independence of England and of every other country now and forever. In the coming struggle to keep our country out of war, to break all entangling alliances with foreign nations, to keep the fruits of the American Revolution, we shall stand in need of resurrected American citizens who have the ideals and the courage and the bravery of the Easter martyrs we honor tonight."

Father Curran denounced Britain's efforts to drag Ireland into war by occupying Irish ports, castigated the British for oppressing Catholic minorities in Northern Ireland today and recalled Ireland's 700-year-old persecution at the hands of England.

"For the cause of the Easter uprising of 1916," he said, "we must recall seven centuries of Irish persecution by the English. For 700 years the tyrannical government of England had crushed every democratic aspiration of the Irish nation into the dust.

"For 700 years the tyrannical government of England had waged war against Irish industry, agriculture, commerce, education and against the religion espoused by a majority of the Irish people.

"For 700 years the brutal soldiers of England had watered the soil of Ireland with Irish blood. For 700 years the brutal government of England had suspended civil liberties in Ireland whenever it suited her program of enslavement.

"For 700 years the tyrannical government of England had broken treaty after treaty with the Irish people. For 700 years it had refused to grant the Irish people a freely elected and fully independent Irish legislature to which the Irish nation like any other nation is entitled.

"Let those who would criticize the Easter uprising of 1916 remember that this American nation which we love and which we will forever keep independent of England, endured the tyranny of England for only 17 years before armed rebellion struck out successfully against that tyranny."

Lindbergh Assails War-Mongers at Peace Rally

COLONEL Charles Lindbergh came to New York April 23 to address a meeting sponsored by the America First Committee and almost started a popular uprising in favor of peace.

New Yorkers had never seen anything like it since that day in June, 1927, when the slim, blond airman returned to receive the plaudits of 120-million Americans after his historic solo flight to Paris.

Thirty-five thousand turned out to greet America's foremost opponent of international murder last week. Five thousand managed to crowd into the main hall in Manhattan Center where Lindbergh spoke.

One thousand five hundred more found seats in an adjoining meeting room. The rest had to stand in the rain-swept streets listening to Lindy's voice from loudspeakers.

The war-mongers had previously done everything in their power to prevent the rally from being held.

They sent the principal speakers threatening telegrams. They refused to give them time on the three major radio networks — although while Lindbergh was telling Americans to stay out of war, Russell Davenport, the ex-Willkie stooge, was clamoring for intervention over the entire Columbia Broadcasting System.

Hundreds of pickets were sent into the crowds to start riots. Police, on orders from "above," tried to prevent scores of reserve seat ticket holders from entering the hall.

Newspapers, in advance notices, carried stories to the effect that the meeting would be attended only by Nazis and Fascists.

But the will of the American people triumphed over every obstacle. The rally was held.

John P. Flynn, the economist, was master of ceremonies. Among the preliminary speakers were Kathleen Norris, the writer, and Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts.

The meeting didn't really begin until 10 o'clock, when a calm, but determined, young man went up to the speaker's rostrum, pulled out a sheaf of paper and cleared his throat.

The audience went wild. For five minutes and more they rose up as one man, shouting and waving American flags. Veteran observers admitted they seldom, if ever, witnessed such spontaneous enthusiasm.

When Lindbergh was at last allowed to begin, he spoke in a clear, even voice.

"Despite the propaganda and confusion of recent months," he said, "it is now obvious that England is losing the war. I believe this is realized even by the British Government.

"But they have one last desperate plan remaining.

"They hope that they may be able to persuade us to send another American Expeditionary Force to Europe and to share with England militarily, as well as financially, the fiasco of this war.

"In time of war, truth is always replaced by propaganda. When England asks us to enter this war, she is considering her own future, and that of her Empire.

"In making our reply, I believe we should consider the future of the United States and that of the Western Hemisphere."

The applause was unanimous. Outside in the streets it was even more thunderous. By this time the crowd was so great that whole city blocks were closed to automobile traffic.

"I say," Lindbergh continued, "it is the interventionist in America, as it was in England and France, who gives comfort to the enemy.

"I say it is they who are undermining the principles of democracy when they demand that we take a course to which more than 80 per cent of our citizens are opposed.

"With their shouts of defeatism, and their disdain of reality, they have already sent countless thousands of young men to death in Europe.

"From the campaign of Poland to that of Greece, their prophecies have been false and their policies have failed.

"There is a policy open to this nation that will lead to success . . . It is based upon the belief that the security of the nation lies in the strength and character of its own people.

"It recommends the maintenance of armed forces sufficient to defend this hemisphere from attack by any combination of foreign powers.

"It demands faith in an independent American destiny.

"It is a policy not of isolation, but of independence; not of defeat, but of courage.

"It is a policy that led this nation to success during the most trying years of our history, and it is a policy that will lead us to success again.

"The United States is better situated from a military standpoint than any other nation in the world. Even in our present condition of unpreparedness no foreign power is in a position to invade us today.

"If we concentrate on our own defenses and build the strength that this nation should maintain, no foreign army will ever attempt to land on American shores.

"War is not inevitable for this country . . . Over a hundred million people in this nation are opposed to entering the war.

"If the principles of democracy mean anything at all, that is reason for us to stay out.

"If we are forced into a war against the wishes of an overwhelming majority of our people, we will have proved democracy such a failure at home that there will be little use fighting for it abroad.

"We have been led toward war by a minority of our people. This minority has power. It has influence. It has a loud voice.

"Whether or not we do enter the war rests upon the shoulders of you in this audience, upon us here on this platform, upon meetings of this kind that are being held by Americans in every section of the United States today.

"We need your support, and we need it now. The time to act is here."

After Lindbergh had concluded, a cry went through the audience, "Lindy for President."

The meeting closed with the reading of a letter to President Roosevelt, written by an English woman.

It stated: "In the name of God and for the sake of all God's people on this earth, let us have peace."

Next day the New York press outdid itself in venom and slander against the rally. The Independent Order of B'rith Abraham publicly announced: "We Jews in America are alarmed at Colonel Lindbergh's apparent acquiescence in the heartless persecution of our race . . ."

Not only the Jews but everyone else interested in sending Americans to another wholesale massacre in Europe was alarmed.

The war clique was beginning to realize that the destruction of the United States would not be an easy task.

America First—and How!

LAST week Milwaukee was the center wherefrom Senator Burton K. Wheeler broadcast a stirring message of America First-ism to the thousands who packed the auditorium and to the tens of thousands of other listeners unable to be present.

The intrepid Senator intimated that if the war mongers — the unholy minority — persist in plaguing the American people with their poisonous propaganda, the net result will be the establishment of a new political party to sweep them into oblivion.

George Washington was opposed by the Tories of his day.

And who are the Tories of this day?

Franklin Delano Roosevelt is Tory chieftain.

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., is Tory treasurer.

Cordell Hull is Tory trainer.

The moving picture industry, the radio industry and a portion of the controlled press (controlled by the same minority) are the Tory propagandists.

They are no different than the Tories of 1776 inasmuch as they are determined to stand by the successor of George III and for all he stands.

According to the International News Service (April 23): "A charge that international bankers and British interests are exerting tremendous pressure on President Roosevelt to induce him to throw the United States into the war, climaxed a militant speech last night by Senator Burton K. Wheeler."

And the Tories in international banking were singled out for special mention, according to the above words by Senator Wheeler, who rose above the elements of politics.

The American people know what dangerous Tories this minority is — the minority which has gained such undemocratic power over our press, radio, motion picture industry, finance, departmental stores, government professional life and education.

The America First Committee is turning the tide from the red shores of war to the smooth sands of peace.

Let every patriot get behind the America First Committee to scatter the Tories and their Toryism to the four winds.

25th Year of Social Justice Leadership by Pastor of Royal Oak to be Marked by Rapid Progress of Magazine He Founded

On Sunday, June 29, Father Coughlin will observe his twenty-fifth anniversary in the Catholic priesthood. To him this day will be one of happy retrospection.

To his vast host of friends throughout America, June 29 will be an occasion for jubilation. It marks a quarter-century of activity in Christianity and social justice.

Father Coughlin founded SOCIAL JUSTICE Magazine. The management wishes in a substantial manner to commemorate this event during his Jubilee Year.

It wishes to prove to Father Coughlin that the great movement inaugurated by him is gaining in America.

It wishes to do this by increasing the circulation of SOCIAL JUSTICE Magazine to the extent of a quarter-million NEW subscribers.

For this purpose the great "JUBILEE" contest opens today.

During the next three and one-half months $15,000 in cash and commissions will be paid to winners who make of this great national enterprise a success.

Additional circulation, both new and renewal, is the sole purpose of this contest. Prizes will be awarded only on the basis of merit; and merit will be credited only on the basis of votes. Each new subscription and each renewal subscription counts for so many votes as shown in the accompanying vote schedules.

This is a contest for every reader of SOCIAL JUSTICE who wishes to pay tribute to Father Coughlin during his Jubilee Year by advancing the national cause he espouses.

It is a contest for every social-justice-minded man or woman, boy or girl during his or her spare time this summer.

It is a contest for young, middle aged and old anywhere in this land, which so sorely needs application of Father Coughlin's remedies.

And nobody loses in this great competition. Everybody is compensated for his or her efforts. There is a Grand Cash Prize of $2,500; a Second Prize of $1,500; a Third Prize of $1,250; a Fourth Prize of $750.00; a Fifth Prize of $650.00; a Sixth Prize of $550.00; a Seventh Prize of $400.00; an Eighth Prize of $300.00.

There are 27 Special Cash Prizes totalling $1,000, which will be paid to active contestants during the progress of the campaign.

That's not all. A commission of 10% will be paid on all cash business turned in by those who do not win grand prizes.

So, you see, as a contestant in this great "JUBILEE" campaign you are not only aiding the purposes of Father Coughlin and SOCIAL JUSTICE Magazine, as well as America as a whole, but you are striking for handsome prizes for yourself or a substantial reward for your co-operation.

Father Coughlin's great Jubilee Day is June 29.

We wish that day to mark the climax of this great national campaign. The first or "SUNRISE PERIOD" of the contest closes on June 30. That means that, in order to take full advantage of this opportunity, you should enter the contest immediately.

By so doing you stand a better chance of winning the First Grand Prize or any of the other grand cash prizes. Let your friends and acquaintances know early that you are in the contest to win.

By entering early you will have working materials in your hands at the very start.

By entering early you will have some time and perhaps for the full length of the contest your town or community exclusively to yourself — without competition.

By entering early you will be able to prove your regard for Father Coughlin by turning in a large amount of business before the date of his Jubilee.

Polish White Paper Reveals War Intrigue

HEREWITH we publish pages 16, 17, 18 and 19 of the "Polish Documents Relative to the Origin of the War."

The pages were composed by the Polish Ambassador to the United States and were addressed to the Minister of Foreign Affairs in Warsaw, January 12th and January 16th, 1939 — more than two years ago.

The authenticity of these documents will be denied by some, whose only argument will be wind — not facts.

The authenticity of these documents can be substantiated in several ways.

This will be revealing to all readers of SOCIAL JUSTICE, and particularly to all Poles.

Following are the official words of Count Jerzy Potocki to the Polish Minister for Foreign Affairs.

They are words relative to America's entrance into the war — a war which Ambassador Bullit said would not be entered into by the United States at the beginning, but that the United States would finish it.

Re: Internal political situation in U.S.A. (Public Opinion against Germany, the Jewish question)

"To His Excellency
The Minister of Foreign Affairs
in Warsaw

"Public opinion in America nowadays expresses itself in an increasing hatred of everything Fascist, hatred of Chancellor Hitler and in fact everything connected with National Socialism. Above all, propaganda here is entirely in Jewish hands. Jews own practically 100% of the broadcasting stations, cinemas, press organs and periodicals. Although American propaganda is somewhat rough-shod and paints Germany as black as possible — they certainly know how to exploit religious persecutions and concentration camps — yet, when bearing public ignorance in America in mind their propaganda is so effective that people here have no real knowledge of the true state of affairs in Europe. Nowadays the majority of Americans regard Chancellor Hitler and National Socialism as the greatest evil and the greatest danger that have befallen the world

"The whole situation in this country constitutes an excellent forum for all classes of public speakers and for refugees from Germany and Czecho-Slovakia who are not backward in inflaming American public opinion with a torrent of anti-German abuse and vilification. All these speakers extol American liberty and compare it with conditions in the totalitarian countries. It is interesting to observe that in this carefully thought-out campaign — which is primarily conducted against National Socialism — no reference at all is made to Soviet Russia. If that country is mentioned, it is referred to in a friendly manner and people are given the impression that Soviet Russia is part of the democratic group of countries. Thanks to astute propaganda, public sympathy in U.S.A. is entirely on the side of Red Spain.

"Side by side with this propaganda an artificial war-panic is also created. Americans are induced to believe that peace in Europe is hanging by a thread and that war is inevitable. No effort is spared to impress upon the American mind that in the event of a world-war the U.S.A. must take an active part in a struggle for freedom and democracy.

"President Roosevelt was first in the field to give expression to his hatred of Fascism. He had a two-fold purpose in mind: firstly, he wanted to divert American public opinion from difficult and complicated domestic problems, particularly, however, from the struggle that was going on between Capital and Labour. Secondly, by creating war-panic and rumours of a European crisis, he wanted to induce Americans to endorse his huge program of armaments, as that program was in excess of normal American requirements.

"Commenting on Roosevelt's first purpose, I must say that conditions on the American Labour Market are constantly growing worse: unemployment to-day already totals 12 millions. Federal and State administrative expenditure is increasing daily. The billions of dollars which the Treasury spends on relief work is the only factor which at present maintains a certain amount of peace and order in this country. So far there have been only the usual strikes and local unrest. But no one can say how long this State subsidy will continue. Public agitation and indignation, severe conflicts between private enterprise and enormous Trusts on the one hand, and with Labour circles on the other, have created many enemies for Roosevelt and caused him many sleepless nights. As to Roosevelt's second purpose, I can only add that, as an astute politician and expert on American mentality, he has succeeded in quickly and adroitly diverting public opinion from the true domestic situation and interesting that opinion in foreign policy.

"The modus operandi was perfectly simple. All Roosevelt had to do was to stage correctly, on the one hand, the menace of world-war brought about by Chancellor Hitler, while on the other hand, a bogey had to be found that would gabble about an attack on the U.S.A. by the totalitarian countries. The Munich Pact was indeed a godsend to President Roosevelt. He lost no opportunity in translating it as France's and England's capitulation to bellicose German militarism. As people say in this country, Hitler drew a gun on Chamberlain. In other words, France and England had no choice and had to conclude a most shameful peace

"Furthermore, the brutal treatment meted out to the Jews in Germany as well as the problem of the refugees are both factors which intensify the existing hatred of everything connected with German National Socialism. In this campaign of hatred, individual Jewish intellectuals such as Bernard Baruch, Lehman, Governor of New York State, Felix Frankfurter, the newly appointed Supreme Court Judge, Morgenthau, the Financial Secretary and other well-known personal friends of Roosevelt have taken a prominent part in this campaign of hatred. All of them want the President to become the protagonist of human liberty, religious freedom and the right of free speech. They want the President to punish all anti-Semitic agitation. This particular group of people, who are all in highly-placed American official positions and who are desirous of being representatives of 'true Americanism,' and as 'Champions of Democracy' are, in point of fact, linked with international Jewry by ties incapable of being torn asunder. For international Jewry — so intimately concerned with the interests of its own race — President Roosevelt's 'ideal' role as a champion of human rights was indeed a godsend. In this way Jewry was able not only to establish a dangerous centre in the New World for the dissemination of hatred and enmity, but it also succeeded in dividing the world into two warlike camps. The whole problem is being tackled in a most mysterious manner. Roosevelt has been given the power to enable him to enliven American foreign policy and at the same time to create huge reserves in armaments for a future war which the Jews are deliberately heading for.

"It is easy for American domestic policy to divert public opinion in this country from an increasing anti-Semitic feeling. This is done by talking of the necessity for defending faith and individual liberty against the menace of Fascism.

Jerzy Potocki, Ambassador
of the Republic of Poland."

Re: Conversation with Ambassador Bullitt

"To His Excellency
the Polish Minister for Foreign Affairs
in Warsaw

"The day before yesterday I had a lengthy conversation with Ambassador Bullitt in the Embassy, where he called on me. B. is travelling to Paris on the 21st inst. after having been absent for almost three months. He is leaving with trunks full of instructions, reports of conversations and directions from President Roosevelt, from the Department of State and from the Senators belonging to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

"From my conversation with Bullitt I had the impression that President Roosevelt had acquainted him in detail with the views of the United States in the present European crisis. Bullitt is to report to the Quai d'Orsay and is also to convey these views in his conversations with European statesmen. The content of these directions, of which B. informed me in our half hour conversation, is as follows:

"1) A new impulse in foreign policy inspired by President Roosevelt who sharply and emphatically condemns the totalitarian states.

"2) The war-preparations of the United States on sea, on land and in the air, which are being executed at an increasing speed at the colossal expense of $1,250,000,000.

Comment

"3) A moral assurance that the United States are abandoning their policy of isolation and in case of war are ready to grant active support to Britain and France, America being prepared to place her whole financial and material resources at their disposal.

"Replying to my question concerning what predictions Bullitt can make for 1939, he said that he fears the danger of a conflict in the spring between France and Italy concerning colonies. He is of the opinion that the victory of the Loyalists in Spain will place France in a very difficult position, for in this way she is surrounded on all sides by Fascist States. Mussolini will then adopt a commanding tone and menace France with war.

"Replying to my question whether Germany would aid Mussolini in such an undertaking, he said that in his opinion it was very doubtful whether Hitler would allow himself to be persuaded to do more than offer moral support in such an action, for should he do so, then it is clear that a world war would be inevitable.

"Bullitt was categorically of opinion that France should on no account come to any terms with Mussolini. The situation in France had undergone so much improvement in the last few months that she could, even though quite unaided, defeat the Italian army and the Italian fleet if Italy were to attack her without provocation. He characterized Mussolini's mode of procedure as mere 'gangsterism' and blackmail.

"During the course of the conversation Bullitt spoke of Eastern Europe and Germany and stated that the Polish foreign policy under your excellent direction had passed the test of its effectiveness; Poland had emerged from the autumn crisis of last year not only sword in hand, but as victor.

"He thereupon questioned me concerning the relations between Poland and Soviet Russia and the significance of the renewal of the Non-Aggression Pact between Poland and Russia. I replied that everything which had been written in the Press on the Russian question was pure imagination. The renewal of the Non-Aggression Pact with the Soviets was a monentary necessity, the relations between Poland and the Soviets having taken a decided turn for the worse after the Czech crisis. It had merely been the dot on the 'i,' nothing more nor less, merely a question of restoring the order which had been upset by the course of events. On his enquiring about our trade agreement with the Soviets, I replied that this was the consequence of our taking possession of the Olsa territory and of the large industrial enterprises. Poland had been forced to seek new markets which she had to a certain extent found in Soviet Russia.

"Bullitt's attitude towards Soviet Russia was decidedly unfriendly and disparaging.

"Furthermore, he was of opinion that Germany would now hardly venture on an attack in Eastern Europe; Poland, on the one hand, being too strong, and, on the other hand, the situation with regard to Hungary, Rumania and Yugoslavia not yet being sufficiently clarified. Certain preparations still have to be made and positions have to be strengthened. Moreover, he was convinced that Germany would carry out her Ukranian plans, but not before the year 1940.

"I did not discuss this question with Bullitt. I merely asked whether the Western powers would take action in such a case and whether, under pretext of protecting Soviet Russia, they would attack the Reich. Bullitt replied that the democratic States had once and for all abandoned the idea of a mere formal intervention for the protection of any State which might fall a victim to a German attack.

Jerzy Potocki, Ambassador
of the Republic of Poland."

Australian Turmoil

WHEN the tragedy of the Battle of Greece will be publicly recorded, it will be discovered that the brave Australian and New Zealand troops were betrayed by politicians.

Following the literal massacre of thousands of soldiers fighting under the British flag, news leaked out to the effect that Australian leaders were sent to Greece on the strength of broken promises, false assurances and inadequate support.

A United Press dispatch from London says (April 23): "It was reported that the Australian Government had agreed to send troops to Greece only after assurances in Libya that the gains there were absolutely secure . . ."

In a gesture of pouring oil on troubled waters, the British Government appointed Lieutenant Governor Sir Thomas Blamey, Australian commander, to be second in command to General Sir Archibald Wavell, head of the defeated Allied armies in Greece.

And Premier Menzies of Australia, sojourning in London, radioed to his fellow countrymen that all was well; that it was the duty of the Australian troops to do and die lest the world condemn Britain for running out on her Allies.

But all was not well. Labor Party members of the Australian Parliament drew up a motion of censure, indirectly condemning the government for sacrificing so futilely so many Australians.

And the Labor Party, gaining strength day by day, drew up other plans to seize the Australian government and strike a blow at war mongering which eventually will take Australia out of the Empire unless the Empire takes the war mongers out of London.

Exercise in Propaganda

A CHICAGO reader supplied us with the following "exercise in propaganda," which appeared recently in the Tribune.

It runs as follows:

Premier Petain Speaks of Money

THE Irish Standard (March 14) published the following most interesting pronouncement made by the Petain Government of France.

Definitely, it was not printed in American papers because it is opposed to American internationalism.

SOCIAL JUSTICE is proud to reprint this money bulletin because it is in line with suggestions made by Father Coughlin years ago.

Here it is:

"The State will advance long-term loans without interest to commerce and industry in France, the newly-appointed Minister for National Production, M. Pucheux, has announced in an address to the Press (according to the official bulletin, 'Nouvelles de France').

" 'The selfish, unprincipled and anarchical can no longer meddle with our economic interests, for we want to establish a solid, new system directed by wise, devoted and able men,' said the Minister.

" 'Although we find ourselves in absolute penury, through the absence of men and wealth, the transition from the old regime to the new must be rapid. I am fortunate to have zealous and prudent collaborators, and it is our aim to produce tangible results.

" 'We are determined to cut out that spirit of indifference which had seeped into the very roots of the old Civil Service system.

" 'The problem facing us at the moment is the lot of the labouring men who have advanced in years. Admiral Darlan has given us every encouragement in the draft of a plan whereby these honest men of toil, on whose lives the sun has begun to set, will receive a just reward for their years of work. It is now only a question of hours before our project will be approved by the Government. Workmen between the ages of 60 and 65 will receive a pension. Those resident in the Provinces will receive 3,600 francs per year, while men domiciled in Paris will be entitled to an annual pension of 5,200 francs.

" 'It would be to contravene national solidarity not to help industrialists and commercial men to find their feet again after the violent blasts of war. The State will advance them long-term loans without interest.

" 'The new national structure will strangle the immorality and bureaucratic autonomy of capitalism.

" 'Human personality will be restored to its rightful pedestal, for man will be no longer a slave to money or financial systems. He will accept work as a necessity for his existence, always mindful of the spiritual value that his Christian patrimony has taught him to bestow on the honest sweat of toil.

" 'It is our aim to cultivate respect and honour for work. This we will do by restoring man, the temple of an immortal soul, to his rightful place in God's plan. He will no more be considered as a mere machine, void of his human personality.' "

The Roosevelt Administration did not go for this kind of social justice.

It prefers the social justice in finance as devised by the Rothschilds, the Warburgs — the same kind practiced by the Kuhn-Loebs, the Lehman Brothers and the Morgans.

Propaganda in Schoolbooks

History Made to Order

THE AMERICAN Colonists who revolted against British tyranny were just a "mob of no-good malcontents."

The impression that they were "oppressed" by Great Britain is grossly exaggerated.

The Stamp Act against which the colonists rebelled was perfectly legal and justifiable.

Factual history?

No, British propaganda which has masqueraded as history in textbooks used in public schools throughout the United States.

Thus the current wave of pro-British propaganda and sentiment which has swept America to the very brink of the European war, need be no surprise.

For many years Great Britain, officially and unofficially, has been working on the long range task of absorbing the United States into its imperial sphere.

Her Cecil Rhodes and her Andrew Carnegie strove valiantly during their lifetime to further this most cherished dream. They left huge endowments that their work might be continued. Other loyal Britishers and pseudo-Americans have formed organizations engaged in educating Americans to the British "point of view."

One of the choice methods employed is the re-writing of American history textbooks so that the historic enmity between the United States and Great Britain is toned down and glossed over.

Facts of history have been distorted.

The heroic founders of this nation have been disparaged.

Perhaps the most complete and most damaging testimony to support that charge is a report submitted in 1923 to John F. Hylan, then mayor of New York City.

Mayor Hylan had received a series of complaints from patriotic organizations that history textbooks used in New York's public schools contained anti-American propaganda.

He appointed David Hirshfield, Commissioner of Accounts of New York City, to investigate the charges. After reading the books in question, conducting extensive research, and holding five public hearings, this investigator submitted an amazing account of pro-British, anti-American propaganda being fed to American schoolchildren.

As a result of the investigation some of the books were revised, but even in their revised form they retained a distinctly pro-British attitude.

The Hirshfield report was reprinted in the Congressional Record.

Naming 8 texts which contained revised "facts" concerning the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812 and other Anglo-American controversies, Hirshfield reported that:

"Under the specious pretense of 'promoting more friendly relations' and 'mutual understanding' with Great Britain, our school children are now being taught not the consecrated maxim 'Taxation without representation is tyranny,' but, quite to the contrary, that 'In England's taxation of the Colonies there was no injustice or oppression,' and that the real reason independence was sought was because after England had at great cost crushed out autocracy in the Western Hemisphere the colonists no longer needed the protection of the mother country and were unwilling to pay their fair share of the costs incurred . . .

"The martyrdom of Nathan Hale, whose only regret on the British scaffold was that he had but one life to give to his country, is in all of them ignored. In most of them there is no mention of Joseph Warren, Ethan Allen, Anthony Wayne, Paul Revere, Molly Pitcher, and Betsy Ross. In one there is a page of praise for Benedict Arnold.

"Such important battles as Bunker Hill, Bennington, Oriskany, and Kings Mountain are omitted.

"Such decisive victories as Ticonderoga, Saratoga, New Orleans, and the capture of the Serapis are belittled.

"The inspiring slogans, 'We have met the enemy and they are ours,' 'Don't give up the ship,' and 'I've not yet begun to fight' are either omitted or discredited.

"French aid in the Revolution is by all, but one, of these authors attributed to shameful motives.

"As a result of these new texts the children are now being taught in our public schools misrepresentations such as the following:

"That the American Revolution was merely a civil war between the English people on both sides of the sea and their 'German' king; . . .

"That such patriots as Samuel Adams, John Hancock, and Patrick Henry were mere disreputable characters;

"That Thomas Jefferson deserved a halter;

"That the North saved the Union only through England's 'heroic' support: . . .

"That our country's history has been 'hitherto distorted through unthinking adherence to national prejudices'."

Mr. Hirshfield declared that apparently the authors of these falsehoods "wanted to convey the impression that our history, our Government, and everything else American is all wrong, and that the sole hope for American progress lies in our renouncing our American traditions, surrendering our American spirit, and becoming an integral part of the British Empire, as Cecil Rhodes directed in the first draft of his will, quoted in Basil Williams' 'Life of Cecil Rhodes'."

Mr. Hirshfield quoted a portion of the document left by Rhodes—empire-builder, diamond king and founder of the famous Rhodes Scholarship Fund.

It shows clearly the mind of internationalist financiers and their hopes for world domination by Great Britain. Their pious pretense of "fighting for democracy" can be viewed with considerable misgivings upon scanning the following passage from that draft.

It directed that a secret society should be endowed with the following objectives:

"The extension of British rule throughout the world . . . the colonization by British subjects of all lands where the means of livelihood are attainable by energy, labor, and enterprise, and especially the occupation by British settlers, of the entire continent of Africa, the Holy Land, the valley of the Euphrates, the islands of Cyprus and Candia, the whole of South America, the islands of the Pacific not heretofore possessed by Great Britain, the whole of the Malay Archipelago, the seaboard of China and Japan, the ultimate recovery of the United States of America as an integral part of the British Empire."

Somewhat similar aims were set forth by the late Andrew Carnegie, who migrated to this country from Scotland and became a multi-millionaire, but retained his fealty to Britain.

In his "Triumphant Democracy" (1893) Carnegie wrote: "Time may dispel many pleasing illusions and destroy many noble dreams, but it shall never shake my belief that the wound caused by the wholly unlooked-for and undesired separation of the mother from her child is not to bleed forever."

To vindicate his judgment Carnegie donated millions of dollars to propagate the scheme. The Carnegie Corporation of New York, founded in 1911 with an endowment of $135-million, has for its objective, according to the New York World-Telegram's "World Almanac," "the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States and the British dominions and colonies."

* * *

That the broad British movement of Rhodes, Carnegie and others is bearing fruit is attested by recent Anglo-American relations.

By aiding Britain's war effort to the hilt, the United States is a virtual military ally of that belligerent nation.

In the United States pro-British Americans are giving ardent support to the British cause.

Clarence K. Streit's "Union Now" plan is gathering momentum.

It is evident that the American mind is being moulded to British form.

One wonders what part the pro-British history books may have played in this theatre of "education." One also wonders how un-American texts find their way so readily into American public schools.

Let President-General McCamant of the National Society of Sons of the American Revolution tell us. Mr. Hirshfield reported to Mayor Hylan that Mr. McCamant testified in that regard:

"Everyone of the publishing houses has a force of smooth promoters, selected because of their personality, who go about the country bringing about the introduction of textbooks, not on their merits, but on the popularity and other persuasive qualities of the men who promote them."

The readiness of teachers, as long ago as 1918, to succumb to un-American, pro-British propaganda amazed Mr. Hirshfield. In his report he cited an excerpt from a statement by the American History Teachers Association, submitted to Congress, October 22, 1918.

It read: "Attention is directed to the old

'Democratic' Russia Manifests Its 'Friendship'

'Let's You and Him Fight'— Theme of Soviet-Jap Pact

THE recently announced non-aggression pact between Soviet Russia and Japan, predicted months ago in these columns, when the very suggestion of such a rapprochement seemed preposterous to many, is subject to various interpretations.

SOCIAL JUSTICE believes, however, that the significance of the agreement, from the Soviet standpoint can be summed up in that old colloquialism "Let's you and him fight."

"You" in this instance is Japan. "Him" is the United States.

In entering the pact with its supposed enemy, Japan, and announcing simultaneously the signing of a new trade agreement with Germany, Soviet Russia has again double-crossed British and American statesmen who have been wooing Stalin assiduously for some time.

By giving Japan assurances of neutrality in the Far East, the Soviets have in fact flashed the go-ahead signal for Japan's threatened expansion to the south — a move that almost certainly would involve the United States and Britain in war with the Nipponese.

Yet, careful analysis of the pact suggests that Russia, not Japan, gained most by it. Adolf Hitler, who, it is believed engineered the deal, will discover that Russia's shrewd policy of self-advantage has secured another diplomatic triumph.

Encouraging Japan to undertake a dubious war against the United States and Britain will permit the Soviet eventually to expand further in Asia — without serious resistance from the weakened Japs.

In return for this prospect the Reds pledged not to attack Japan in Manchukuo. But actually this was no concession, for it is extremely unlikely that they intended to do so. The history of the last 10 years shows that Japan, not Russia, has been responsible for all trial tests of war on the Manchukuan-Mongolian borders. Russia has nothing to gain by attacking Japan, but she has everything to gain by egging that nation into an attack on the Dutch, British and American possessions in the Pacific. The latter combination of powers, assisted by China, conceivably might annihilate Japan in a few months. Russia then would be free to sweep through the Asiatic mainland and even into India.

There probably were other considerations, too, impelling Russia to sign with its historic rival. As recently as the Hitler-Molotov conversations it was evident that Germany would pressure her allies — Russia and Japan — to forget their mutual differences in a reciprocal defense pact. Hitler's purpose, of course, would be to enlist the co-operative support of those two powers in driving Britain out of the Orient, and in keeping the bulk of the American fleet in Asiatic waters where it could be of no use to Britain in the latter's battle of the Atlantic.

Now that the pact is an accomplished fact the militarists of Japan may translate their diplomatic victory into rash action, for with the threat of Soviet interference removed, they will be more willing to launch their long anticipated attack against the East Indies. The Chinese Central News Agency sensed that possibility in reporting the presence of 70,000 Japanese soldiers on Hainan Island, off the coast of French Indo-China. The crack Kwangtung Army guarding Manchukuo is also available for action in the South Pacific.

Perhaps the grim battle in the Pacific will break soon. There is no question that the United States would be involved, since it is committed to defend British possessions in the Orient.

Searching the Russ-Jap pact for a blueprint of definite commitments in future European events is almost futile. The careful phraseology of the document is remarkable more for its omissions than for its positive statements.

In view of the contradictions between it, the Moscow-Berlin mutual defense pact and the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo agreement, it would appear that a conflict between Russia and Germany would leave Japan free to aid either of the belligerents or both. But that conclusion does not hold when one considers Japan's previous commitments to Hitler.

Considerable basis exists for the suspicion that one of Stalin's prime motives in signing with Japan was his fear that the present German drive into southeastern Europe might turn toward the Ukraine; that the Red dictator wished to secure Russia's rear in case he should attack or be attacked by Germany.

Whether his recent trade with Japan would guarantee Japanese neutrality in that contingency is highly questionable, however, since the exact terms of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo agreement obligates Japan to aid Germany.

Confusing, to be sure; but that's modern diplomacy.

In view of the recent developments in the Balkans a Nazi attack against the Ukraine is not altogether improbable. No doubt Stalin and Japan's Matsuoka discussed that matter in their recent conversations, but it is certain that no agreement of action was stated openly in their non-aggression pact.

Since that treaty was, we believe, dictated by Hitler, it is certain that it does not supersede or abrogate the commitments of the previous Axis agreement, also Hitler's handiwork, wherein Japan pledged her aid to Rome and Berlin in the event of an attack by any other power.

If Hitler inspired the Russ-Jap agreement it is ridiculous to suppose that it would operate against him. Yet, Stalin may have seized upon the opportunity to fraternize with Japan in the hope that it would prove profitable in the future. He may have reasoned that if Germany attacks its friend, Russia, Japan could be convinced of the danger of remaining true to a power that double-crosses its ally. In that case Japan might be inspired to enter into a full mutual defense pact with Russia to forestall a German move against herself.

The United States Government has sought to minimize the importance of the Russo-Jap treaty. State Secretary Hull remarked laconically, "It is nothing new."

This was a damaging admission that American ambassadors and agents missed the bus in trying to win the good favor of Russia. It also reveals that while the State Department had been railing against Japan for its aggressions, Russia had been cooperating with Japan. The embarrassing question arises therefore: Why were supposedly astute and idealistic American diplomats aiding, abetting and wooing Russia when that godless dictatorship was known to be collaborating with "terrible" Japan?

It is unthinkable that Soviet Russia can be classified as a friendly or neutral power when she openly aligns herself with Japan and Germany—America's supposed enemies.

By freeing Japan for that nation's venture into the South Pacific, the Soviet has again betrayed Anglo-American interests as she did many times before in Europe.

Statesmen must admit that the fear of Russia heretofore has retarded Japan's push southward. The most ardent Sovietphiles have proclaimed that Russia should be coddled because, through her aid to China, she was fighting the battle for democracy in the Far East; that Russia constituted the greatest threat to Japan's grandiose schemes.

But now that Stalin has double-crossed them those arguments must be tossed aside. Wiley Stalin will clean up in Asia after an American-Japanese war, just as he will clean up in Europe after the conflict there.

charge that the study of the American revolution in our schools tends to promote an anti-British state of mind. It is a natural reaction to demand revision of our textbooks with a view to cultivation of a pro-British state of mind; and that reaction is now actually in evidence."

Publishers like George Haven Putnam, prominent New Yorker, aided and abetted the great British cause, it would appear. According to Hirshfield, Putnam, a native Englishman and a high official in the English-speaking Union, repudiated the American Declaration of Independence in a speech July 4, 1918, before the Anglo-Saxon Fellowship in London.

Putnam asserted, said Hirshfield: "I want to see not a Declaration of Independence, but a Declaration of Interdependence—an acknowledgment that the two peoples belong together . . .

"Textbooks are now being prepared which will present a juster account of the events of 1775-83, 1812-15, and 1861-65."

Exposed to such truth distortions as disclosed by Mayor Hylan's investigator, and to the more widespread propaganda of today, it is small wonder that so many Americans are prone to accept the British "point of view."

It is easily understood why so many applaud a National Administration whose primary interest apparently is the welfare of Great Britain and whose foreign policies therefore react to the disparagement of our Americans.

Thinks 'Social Justice' Too Anti-Nazi in Polish Article

To the Editor:

It was a source of both surprise and regret to find in the issue of March 31 the hysterical effusion entitled "Poland — a 'Lost' People." This tearful exercise forfeits all claim to credence through its anonymity and its utter lack of substantiation.

It reeks of the maudlin wails of refugee members of as effete and shiftless an aristocracy as ever grew fat at the expense of an impoverished peasantry.

A large part of the article in question is devoted to the proposition that, since both Germany and Russia are participating in the occupation of Poland, and since conditions in the Russian area are bad, therefore conditions in the German area are bad also — an ancient and shabby rhetorical device, whose fallacy is patent to the merest beginner in the study of logic, and which only makes one wonder if conditions in the Russian area are quite as bad as certain interested parties would have us believe.

The writer speaks wildly of Poles doing forced labor "in German factories and fields." As a matter of fact, except for prisoners of war, there are no Poles on forced labor in Germany. There are, however, thousands of Poles working in Germany of their own free will, receiving the same wages and possessing the same rights as German laborers.

Available statistics, vouched for by authorities who do not seek to cloak their identity in a twofold mist of anonymity, indicate that churches in Poland, including several built last year with the financial assistance of the German administration, are open and crowded with worshippers. Available statistics indicate that Polish priests are receiving the same salaries from the treasury of the "Government General" as they did from the Polish state before the war.

One word more before I finish. Your commentator declares that "the Poles still resident in Poland are forbidden . . . to practice their Catholic religion, and . . . thousands have paid the penalty for disobedience with their lives. It is a fact that a considerable number of Poles have been executed either for sabotage or for their part in the massacre, amid unspeakable atrocities, of fifty-five thousand or more German civilians in the early days of September, 1939.

As a Catholic, I protest most emphatically against any attempt to represent sabotage or the murder of non-combatants as religious practices.

Incidentally, in all your issues since the beginning of the war, one would search in vain for one word uttered, for a single tear shed, on behalf of these unfortunates, brutally slaughtered for the sole crime of being Germans. But then, of course, most of them were only Protestants.

Eire Only Democracy

To the Editor:

As a student of Irish affairs, I am greatly edified by your defense of the Irish cause in the present crisis. I cannot see that Churchill's appeal for Irish ports and airfields can or should induce the government of Eire to comply with such proposals.

On April 9, 1941, Churchill pleaded with Eire to lend the aid of its geographical importance until the "battle of the Atlantic" should be decided in Britain's favor. And, by the same token, he tenderly pinned the appellation of "sister-nation" on the little green sod.

Of course, every Irishman knows what a sweet, devoted sister Miss Merrie England has always been! How these British gentlemen atomize every potential ally with rose-water when an urgency arises, and how fast their love wanes for those nations which refuse to endorse Britain's thirst for perpetual greed and exploitation!

To every ardent advocate of democracy, I say imperatively: "Eire is the only democracy extant." Every other country is, by the change of events, compelled to cringe beneath a dictator, either in the form of a large or small group. In a world engulfed in war, millions are condemning the perfidy and treachery of their governments.

But in Eire, the will of the people still stands foremost. It is the Dail Eireann's first and last consideration. In that country, the government is the servant of the people, countenancing no policy save that which the people approve and demand. This, to me, is democracy in its rightful aspect, and to Eire goes the credit of recognizing the people's voice as the propelling force in the nation's progress.

British Propaganda

To the Editor:

That we in the United States have no business meddling in European affairs is apparent to all but those who are susceptible to British and Tory propaganda and some who will profit by our entry into the European mess.

Propaganda to be good must be so subtle that it cannot be recognized as such, and surely the British are showing themselves to be expert in that line if we can judge from the effect on the average American. Just a few months ago the average citizen was against any kind of act which might bring us into the war, but each week shows one more neutrality principle cast aside by the average American. They walk the road to war in utter ignorance of what they are doing. Thus have they been hypnotized by the war mongers and the propagandists. When will Americans wake up and cast out the war mongers from Washington?

In practically all the European countries (except Russia) the average population is several hundred to the square mile while in this country of ours it does not exceed an average of forty persons to the square mile. Therefore, social conditions in Europe cannot be measured by the same yardstick as we measure such things in our country.

Many years ago Central Europe and the British Isles encouraged their peoples to migrate to other less settled countries where the opportunities would be better. This country was that land of opportunity and it still is for those who have any ambition at all. Yet, the New Deal preaches now and has done so for eight years, that we are about all washed up and that our type of government is inadequate for present conditions. That is no different philosophy than that taught by Marx and Engles nor any different from the modern of the radical Communists like Stalin.

The Star Spangled Banner

To the Editor:

Here is something that few Americans know: the story about the "Star Spangled Banner"—that it was written while Francis Scott Key was a prisoner on a British battleship and that he wrote this in four verses and yet today most song books and text books show only three verses. The omitted one is considered anti-British.

Why not make this an article in some future issue of the magazine?

The time is getting shorter and we must awaken the people that they are being sold down the river and will find that they have sold their birthright to save a decadent nation that has done their "robbing in the past" and now profess to be the Christian world savers.

Calls 'Union Now' Plan Un-American

To the Editor:

It seems that there should be enough real Americans in this country to preserve the Constitution of the United States and those other symbols of Americanism, our flag and national anthem.

For years our courts and school authorities have insisted that school children pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States. Some children have refused to do this, usually children whose parents are members of Jehovah's Witnesses. This refusal is always publicized and the offenders called to account, yet the powerful forces in America advocating "Union Now" which means the subjugation of our Constitution, our flag and our national anthem are permitted by public authorities to carry on unmolested. I wonder too, how many of the school teachers and principles who insist that their pupils pledge allegiance to the American flag are supporting "Union Now."

Those in this country chanting "there will always be an England" should change it to "there will always be an America." How long would Englishmen in England tolerate among them those who were continually saying, "there will always be an America?"

Keep On Fighting

To the Editor:

During the fight to defeat Dictator Bill 1776, we spent considerable time in writing the members of our abdicated Congress. We could not write long letters to each one, so struck on the plan of constructing a comprehensive one for our good friend, Senator George, Roosevelt's favorite purgee. We had hoped that George had not forgotten the occasion when our ambitious embryo play-boy Dictator said he would drive him from the Senate and public life. But George had forgotten, and also that we were no longer legally in the British Empire; George and his Southern Cavaliers are now vying with each other in making the 48 States the most dutiful and loyal daughter of the Commonwealth of Nations. It is practically done.

But there is still something to be accomplished, and our Dictator can be checked, if not stopped. He is too lacking in ability, intestinal fortitude and leadership to plunge this "sucker" people into a war for which they are totally unprepared. Therefore, if we keep up our fight and bombard Congress to make no appropriations of money unless we have collateral security in tin, rubber or other raw materials, we may achieve some results. If certain members of the American hierarchy were not so completely hog-tied to the money lenders, they might be able to give us some form of leadership.

Vampire Empire

TO THE EDITOR:

It is strange that the Dies Committee does not investigate to determine who are the financial backers of the movement known as "Union Now" with the British Empire.

The bleatings of those who favor such movement smacks very much of treason. Yet those in high places find it not only convenient not to denounce that conspiracy, but by their very silence, in that respect, give tacit approval thereof.

The British Empire is symbolized by a figure of a lion. In this connection, the U.S.A. could very well be symbolized by a figure of a lamb. It has often been demonstrated that when a lion and a lamb enter a union, the entity of the lamb disappears.

What deception and trickery are foisted upon the unthinking, by those fakers, who dwell on the presumed virtues of the British democracy, so-called.

The term British exemplifies the acme of capitalistic imperialism. Therefore, the meaning of the term British is as contrary to the meaning of that of democracy as is the meaning of the term black contrary to the meaning white.

Rather than a figure of a lion, the British Empire could, with greater truth, be symbolized by that of a vampire.

It is evident that the British Empire possessing as it does all that is of value in many of the smaller countries, draws unto itself the wealth accrued as a result of such possessions, and thereby leaves those small countries economically anemic.

The analogy to be drawn from that analysis is that as a vampire supposedly sucks the life-blood from its living victims, the British Empire likewise sucks unto itself the economic life-blood of its victims, that is, the small nations whom it economically dominates.

English Living Standard

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to state that I have lived in England for the greater part of the years 1920 to 1929 and found the standard of living of the working classes in England to be lower than anywhere else on the European continent, in sharp contrast to the wealth of the ruling clique.

But these people were consistently propagandized into believing that theirs was a much higher standard than that of other peoples.

Eliminate Money Monopoly

TO THE EDITOR:

Money was invented by man for the express purpose of conveying goods. It would thus act as a blessing if it were controlled by, of and for all the people, and not by the few fallible men who now hold it in their puny hands. They naturally serve their own aims first.

There never will be a permanent peace under private money control. This selfish force keeps the great races divided — it so rules them. It is the cause of economic strife. It is the main cause of this present world war.

When the plain people of Britain, France, Ireland, Germany, Italy, America and all other great lands demand and get an honest world-wide monetary system, they will have eradicated want in the midst of plenty and the main causes of war at one and the same time. I repeat when this force that drives the wedge between the good peoples of all the earth is removed, we will have lasting peace.

Financing Britain's War

TO THE EDITOR:

This week editorially, Colliers Weekly criticizes the proposition that British capitalists who, they estimate, own around $15½-billion worth of properties within this country (and who have been drawing dividends continuously from us on those investments as the result of our constructive labors), now exchange those securities for government bonds of their own nation — so that such properties may be sold to American citizens and the avails credited upon British debts to our nation.

In this connection, it is interesting to note the comment of Senator Reynolds that after 16 months of war expenditures, the United Kingdom's debt only amounts to 43.6 billions — against her Empire of some 13-million square miles of territory with around 400-million subjects.

The United States with only some 3-million square miles of land and 130-million inhabitants, is already shouldered with some $65-billion of debt and an immediate prospect of at least another $25-billion or so just to build up our own home defenses. With a laboring force of only around 25-million, this already quite a load to be earned in addition to current living requirements.

Considering the vast area, natural resources and productive population of the British Empire, it would seem that her citizens should be satisfied to have the government bonds of their own nation in exchange for these foreign investments within American political boundaries.

Praise From Non-Catholic

TO THE EDITOR:

Please find enclosed my check for the purpose of renewing my subscription to SOCIAL JUSTICE for another year.

Will say that I would consider myself derelict in my duties and unfaithful to the great cause that SOCIAL JUSTICE and its editors stand for, one entirely in harmony with the philosophy and ideology of the founders of these United States — if I did not here commend your publication. For one, I thank God for this Christian patriot, Father Coughlin, and in this my family joins me. We are not Catholics, either.

Our nation is indeed fortunate to have men of his type who tower above party lines, racial lines, church lines, and every other human interest that lure one away from things that concern humanity and God. If ever there was a time when this nation needed the Christian emphasis applied to our every day living, to government, and to business, that time is now.

It is indeed refreshing to read SOCIAL JUSTICE from week to week, for every article is worth while. I was especially impressed by the article, "He Went On" by the Most Rev. Archbishop Goodier, S. J., in the April 7 issue. In this issue also it was refreshing to see exposed the half truth of Hon. Cordell Hull who tried to give the impression before the House Foreign Affairs Committee that Germany was to blame for the disruption of the disarmament conference, when, as a matter of fact, the whole truth is that France and England as well as Germany, all were guilty of preventing effective disarmament.

Then, too, the article "Who Governs Britain?" was a timely topic and again makes clear that those who govern Britain are the International Bankers and Industrialists. I am praying that the God of hosts will continue to bless and give strength to the courageous efforts Father Coughlin is giving not only to our nation, but to the world as well.

We Get Around

TO THE EDITOR:

It may interest you to know how widely some issues of your publication circulate. Today I borrowed a copy of the March 24 issue from a local business man who, in turn, received same from his brother in a small town in Ohio, near Akron. Before long, it will be shown to several people here. The entire issue is good, but the speech of Eamon De Valera is especially noteworthy. I doubt if any large metropolitan daily has ever published any of it in the past twenty years.

Enclosed find twenty cents for which kindly mail me two copies of the March 24 issue.

Meet Dr. Zilboorg and You'll Understand 'P.M.'

UNTIL recently Marshall Field was a multi-millionaire playboy whose most strenuous task was spending the huge fortune left him by his father and grandfather, the founders of the famous Chicago department store bearing the Field name.

One day last year, however, Mr. Field suddenly became one of the stockholders of the New York tabloid, PM, later emerging as practically its sole owner.

Since then he has pumped nearly a million dollars in the pro-war, pro-Communist newspaper and taken an active part in the drive to involve America in the all-out conflict between Germany and the British Empire.

Mr. Field's overnight transformation from nightclub habitue and race track enthusiast to newspaper publicist and amateur politician left cafe society befuddled.

Friends could understand his activity in behalf of England, but his support of Communism, radicalism and atheism and his newspaper's relentless campaign against all things American and Christian remained somewhat of a puzzle.

The mystery was partly lifted in the April number of Current Biography. Mr. Field, the publication stated, was "well psychoanalysed" some time ago and "emerged with the desire to do good in the world."

The millionaire's psychoanalyst, it turns out, is a Dr. Gregory Zilboorg. Mr. Field thinks so much of Dr. Zilboorg that he turned over to him the entire earnings of one of the Field race horses — a sum which allegedly totaled $500,000.

When one investigates the history of Dr. Zilboorg, however, it can be seen that Field has rewarded his doctor in other ways besides in money. The psychoanalyst, it appears, has converted his client to his own weird political beliefs.

For the editorial page of PM and the political writings of Dr. Zilboorg show a marked similarity.

A Russian by birth, Dr. Zilboorg was Secretary to the Minister of Labor in the first Russian revolutionary government. He came to America early in 1919.

At first he set himself up as a writer. In "The Passing of the Old Order in Europe," published in New York in 1920, he attacked Christianity, praised such Communist leaders as Kurt Eisner and Bela Kun, and said "I myself am a Russian revolutionist and have devoted almost all my conscious activities to the revolution."

Of Bela Kun, the Red butcher of Hungary, Dr. Zilboorg had the following to say: "If one compares the messages of Bela Kun to Lenin . . . with the diplomatic notes sent by Clemenceau to Germany . . . one cannot doubt which of the two is more deeply imbued with human dignity.

"Bela Kun speaks in the mood of a temperate and humane nationalist . . ."

Dedicated to such radicals and Bolsheviks as Maxim Gorky, Romain Rolland and Frederick Foerster, Dr. Zilboorg's book dismissed Christianity with the simple statement that it "has been used deliberately to preserve the vested privileges of the established order."

Dr. Zilboorg continued to write numerous magazine articles in the same vein, but in recent years turned to a more lucrative profession—that of probing into the minds of the idle rich. At present he is probably the highest paid psychoanalyst in the United States.

Through the medium of PM, Dr. Zilboorg now watches his ideas being injected daily into the minds of 200,000 readers.

Having already converted Marshall Field to his pro-war, pro-Marxist and anti-Christian program, Zilboorg remains in quiet obscurity while his millionaire client does the work of converting the masses.

Mother's Day

DURING the month of May it has been customary for Americans to set aside a day to honor motherhood.

The word "mother" is associated with the word "life."

The word "mother" also is associated with the word "home" where life is cradled, nursed and matured.

In these days when groups of men are endeavoring to hurtle this nation into war; in these days when wicked men are seizing mothers' sons for slaughter, there could be no better way of commemorating Mother's Day than by campaigning for peace and an abundance of life.

How can we have an abundance of life when the slender revenues of homes, upon which mothers depend, are being exhausted through taxation for destruction?

How can we have an abundance of life when the spirit of destruction is being inculcated into mothers' sons?

The sweet sentiment of bestowing a white rose or carnation upon our mothers is nothing more than a sentiment unless the bestowal is accompanied by a determination on the part of every son in America to rise up against the war mongers who already have brought desolation into the hearts of millions of mothers in Europe.

America must not go to war to save gold mongers and an economic system bent on despoiling America.

America should go to war to save motherhood and the principles related to it.

Prediction Recalled

lowing year a more disastrous depression was awaiting us.

"Nevertheless, I am writing a record and hope to see the day, if these things must come to pass, when the ardent New Deal supporters will reap the whirlwind which they are sowing."

Indeed, the Moscow agent knew whereof he spoke.

He spoke of a plan that had been formulated.

He spoke of a plan that had been accepted by the Roosevelt Administration.

Surely, Father Coughlin would be the last person in America to claim powers of prophecy.

But the date and the year of the fulfillment of the prediction he made in June, 1938, should startle out of their apathy those who have accepted the promises of a war-mongering Administration to keep us out of war; should awaken from their jealousy and opposition those of Father Coughlin's fellow religionists who have been insisting that Father Coughlin was wild-eyed in his speculations.

Knox and Hull are working in the groove cut for them by the destructionists of civilization.

And, again, we ask you, where is the spirit of 1776?

Or, if you are interested in a later date, where is the spirit of Abraham Lincoln of Civil War days?

Indeed the Great Emancipator declared civil war to free the negroes who were enslaved.

Is there not another Abraham Lincoln ready, at this time, to free America from the destructionists who already have enslaved Americans?

Comment

The Crisis of Christianity

THE San Francisco Monitor published the following editorial (April 19), which we recommend highly:

"The crisis of today is the greatest crisis of Christianity in history.

"On the surface it is a mere collision of collectivist have-not nations with the individualist plutocratic nations. That is the mere material expression of an underlying spiritual paroxysm.

"The underlying struggle is to determine whether the teachings of Christ are to continue as a social force at all.

"Marxism is anti-Christian; what Stalin does is anti-Christian; Hitler's Naziism is anti-Christian; Fascism as stated by Mussolini in his own book is anti-Christian; the Masonic naturalism physically crushed in France and Czecho-Slovakia was anti-Christian; and the British-American plutocratic liberalism was tolerant of the Christianity that was compromised by it, as the Spanish Christianity made decadent by the cold oppression of the poor was little more than an instrument of state devoted to the defense of obsolete prerogatives.

"The hollow shell of Fascism has already cracked. One swift campaign against the Moscow clique by Germany's panzers would smash the Russian sham. Then the test would come between Hitler's claim to provide good pastures for the people and the claim of Christian leadership.

"The difficulty with Christian leadership is that the leaders must believe literally in Christ, and must follow Him uncompromisingly, else the Christian thing externally becomes as great a sham as all the other shams, and God lets it be purified by fire and sword.

"There have been other crises: the Greek schisms. the onslaught of Islam; the false popes; the Protestant Revolution; the liberal laissez-faire; the French Revolution; and now the collectivists, by whatever name they are called and on whatever side of the oceans they make their materialist claim on the souls of men.

"The crisis for Christianity is twofold:

"First, there is the scientific attack made from avowed enemies using secret police and fifth columnists;

"Secondly, there is the compromise with ethical principle and Christian doctrine within the body of believers, where men vainly hope to avoid the showdown by futile compromises in so-called practical matters.

"No one is fit to lead Christians as Christians who is not willing to die before his natural time for Christ.

"No phariseeism, no compromise to defend merely material institutionalism will avail to preserve the Faith in a people harassed and tempted by every false prophet that comes along. They have no motive for sacrifice for Christ unless they have the example such as Christ set when He refused to compromise. He died because He claimed Divinity. The Church's claims are divine and may not be compromised."

We are glad to know that the editor of this outstanding Catholic paper condemns compromising Catholics — particularly those leaders who were interested in preserving the materialities of Catholicism, including the church buildings, the school buildings, and the safety of their mortgages.

Total Christianity is the only nostrum to cure the disease of total naturalism.

The readers of SOCIAL JUSTICE, we feel sure, will applaud the editor of The Monitor for what he has to say about naturalistic, back-patting, democracies who were and are as much to blame — if not more so — than is Naziism for the predicament in which the world finds itself today.

A Challenge to Christians

NEW BRITAIN is a monthly magazine published in England by a group of Christians.

In its June 20, 1934, issue there appeared an article entitled, "A Challenge to Christians."

Indeed, Christians are challenged in this day of crisis.

The old order must be destroyed.

A new order must be launched.

Either Christians will launch the new order or anti-Christians will launch it.

There can be no compromise, no amity, in this project.

It is all or nothing.

"You are either with Me or against Me," said Christ.

Here is the challenge to Christians which English Christians issued to the English-speaking world almost seven years ago:

"Standing on the threshold of a new age, it is useful to examine the old order and see why it is that it has proved a failure. To those who do so in the light of Christianity the reason is not far to seek. The whole system has been based on greed and acquisition, and the laws Christ gave have been put on one side as impracticable. It is not surprising that, like the house built upon sand, it is tottering to its fall.

"It would seem that. when the teaching was given, we were not sufficiently advanced to practise it on a wide scale; our civilization therefore was developed by the use of qualities directly opposed to it and still demands these qualities for its maintenance. Thus we live in a vicious circle. Refusing the teaching, we have built a system with which it is incompatible. We have affirmed that the teaching is impracticable, despising the qualities required to practice it, and have persecuted its followers. The qualities we extol are those of the judge, the ruler, and the warrior: but Jesus had no blessing for the qualities most admired by man.

"That the Sermon on the Mount is impracticable has never been demonstrated: it has only been found to be incompatible with a system built up in defiance of it.

"We should know and acknowledge this if we faced the matter squarely. Christians have called Jesus the Son of God, and have worshipped Him for 2,000 years. The time has now come when we must choose whether we will obey Him.

"We call upon the Christian world to throw over completely the old order, and to build up a new system in accordance with the teaching of the Sermon on the Mount. We call upon all Christians in our mother country to unite in building such a system immediately."

Addresses

A SOCIAL JUSTICE reader of St. Regis Falls, New York, writes, requesting the address of the Jewish Spectator and the Jewish Review, magazines which recently printed articles calling for Christians to abandon the "anti-Semitism" of the New Testament.

"Those articles are of immense importance," our correspondent says. "I am anxious to obtain the originals of them."

For the information of other readers who may wish to communicate with the above-mentioned publications, here are the addresses:

Jewish Spectator: 110 W. 40th St., New York City.

Jewish Review: 1650 Broadway, New York City.

Banker Speyer

TIME MAGAZINE prints the following monograph on banker James Speyer:

"The international banking house of Speyer & Co. was 100 years old in 1937. Also, its arteries were beginning to harden. Polished little James Speyer, born in Manhattan, apprenticed in family firms in Paris, London and Frankfurt, still had a thick German accent which he kept more nearly intact than his Manhattan banking house kept its European affiliations.

"Since the World War, European connections had lost a lot of their value as the capital of the financial world moved to the U. S. There was a time when Speyer & Co. could raise $50-million by cable overnight without calling on a single U. S. bank. That was long years after old Philip Speyer had sold millions of dollars worth of U. S. securities abroad to finance the Civil War, made a handsome profit for the house.

"In the post-War twilight, Speyer & Co. floated many a foreign loan, financed railroads, built a railroad in Bolivia, power plants in Manila. But Speyer's London firm was dissolved in 1922; in 1934 the Lazard-Speyer-Ellissen banks in Berlin and Frankfurt were dissolved. Latterly Speyer & Co. has fallen into the sere and yellow leaf.

"Last week Jimmy Speyer, 77, wealthy, still fond of ceremonious European dining, announced what Wall Street had long been expecting: his retirement and the dissolution of Speyer & Co.

Time Magazine could have said that Jimmie Speyer, smarter than his contemporaries in the international banking field, sees the handwriting on the wall. His retirement is well-timed; for, throughout his entire career, he possessed the uncanny ability of smelling the enemy's powder long before the guns crackled in his ears.

Soon the dark-skinned denizens of Kuhn, Loeb & Company, Lehman Brothers, Morgan and Company and others will be emulating Jimmy Speyer.

Soon the American people will begin to recognize the anomaly of the Federal Reserve Banks which create money by a stroke of the fountain pen and pan it off to the American people under the guise of bonds which they, the people, must redeem with hard-earned money manufactured by sweat and blood and tears and privation.

NATIONAL WEEKLY

Founded 1936 by Father Coughlin

Father Coughlin's Jubilee

FATHER COUGHLIN is not on the air.

Nevertheless, the ringing discourses which he delivered while he was on the air are well remembered.

Thousands of persons who were hostile to his ideas now accept them.

Many predictions which he made are being fulfilled so rapidly that even some of his critics admit he possessed information which was unbelievable at the time he disclosed it.

There is no need for Father Coughlin broadcasting now; for he said everything that could be said.

He predicted the Lend-Lease bill when promising politicians were prating of cash and carry.

He predicted the union between Germany and Russia when sycophant politicians were caressing the blood-stained hand of the Kremlin.

He painted a picture of civilian destruction when rocking-chair militarists were planning old-fashioned wars between armies and navies.

He prognosticated our entanglement in the World War by April, 1941 — more than two years before its shadow was apparent to most of us.

He painted a picture of European domination by Nazis when wishful thinkers were prematurely applauding a British victory.

He excoriated the foreign policy of New Dealers which aimed at entangling us in the war despite the fact that campaign orators were promising to keep us out of war.

He named names, mentioning minorities and indexing international bankers who were responsible for the plight of the world.

Why should he go back on the air, now that the pendulum is still swinging leftwards?

This June 29th Father Coughlin will celebrate his twenty-fifth anniversary as a priest.

What will his friends do for him?

His enemies rejoiced that he was off the air; rejoiced that he was silenced; rejoiced that he was called a "faker" by those of his own Faith.

And yet, some of his enemies fear his silence more than they fear his oratory.

Recently a group of them were planning how to get him back on the air in order to cushion the persecution that is in the offing for the minorities and others responsible for getting him off the air.

The repercussions for their stupidity are awaiting them.

Nevertheless, they have bestowed a favor upon Father Coughlin which is highly esteemed.

Some day they will discover its nature.

But what will his friends do for him?

This week there is a notification of a contest to be conducted by SOCIAL JUSTICE Magazine.

Out of the finances resultant from this contest we hope to present a gift to Father Coughlin.

How will you help in this project?

You can help, not only by entering the contest, but also by arousing your courage as it was never aroused before to defy the war-mongers and make your voice for peace dominant on the public rostrums of this nation.
